Britain Cries For Action as Planes Bomb 2 More Ships

British Public Restive.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, June 27.—Two more British merchant ships were bombed in Spanish ports today, bringing closer the hour when the Chamberlain government will be forced by public opinion to take strong action to halt Gen. Franco's repeated attacks on British shipping.

Public opinion in England, Scotland and Wales is becoming increasingly restive as Franco and his allies continue to treat ships flying the Union Jack with a contempt unknown in the day when Britannia really ruled the waves. The Liberal and Labor press have long been urging energetic reprisals against Spanish rebels, and now some of the conservative papers, while not indorsing the idea of an eye for an eye and ship for a ship, are suggesting the government may have to drop its safety-first do-nothing policy.

Honor Involved.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's dilemma is that although he has no love for certain speculative ship owners who are making huge profits in the Spanish trade, he feels he must do something soon to uphold the honor of the British flag and yet is afraid that any drastic action by the British navy or air force may throw a spark into Europe's power magazine and extend the Spanish struggle from a peninsular war into a continental conflagration.

When the House of Commons reconvened this afternoon, after a week-end in which members had an opportunity of sounding public opinion in their constituencies, conservative M. P.'s joined with supporters of the opposition in asking the prime minister to encourage British shipping companies to equip their vessels with antiaircraft guns to ward off unprovoked attacks by bombing planes.

"Many Difficulties."

Refusing to lend such encouragement, Chamberlain explained that there were "a good many difficulties" to be considered, one being that the fitting of merchant ships with antiaircraft guns would require structural alterations. The prime minister intimated that ships would be armed in this way in the

Forgotten in Family Crisis, Child Drowns As Father Gives Blood to Save Mother's Life

Two Brothers Try in Vain to Rescue Him; 'This Will Kill His Mother,' Parent Fears.

By John B. Oakes.

RAIN swept through the streets of Washington yesterday. And that seemed like a fitting ending . . .

Three fair-haired little boys were eating lunch in the shabby one-room home which they shared with their parents—three blocks from the Capitol.

Neither mother nor father was there, however. The father was at work in an Eleventh street barbershop—and the mother was lying critically ill in Gallinger Hospital.

The housekeeper who had been preparing lunch for the children answered a telephone in the gloomy hall. She came back with a grave face.

"Clyde," she said, "run over to your father's shop right away and tell him your mother has to have a blood transfusion within two hours. She is very, very sick."

Thirteen-year-old Clyde Davis, jr., left the house, his two younger brothers trotting along at his side. They gave the message to their care-worn father and went out to play.

* * * *

The boys wandered north to Benning road and east to the bridge that crosses Kingman Lake, whose waters empty into the Anacostia.

The day was hot. The water looked cool to Rayvoughn, 7, the youngest of the three. "I'm going to go wading," he joyfully screamed as he ran down a 20-foot embankment to the edge of the lake.

"Don't go in," warned Clyde with the dignity of an elder brother. But he was too late. Rayvoughn slipped off a sandbank into cold black water that rose far above his head.

Jimmie Davis, 10, did the only thing a brother could do. He plunged in, grabbed Rayvoughn, but began to sink beneath the weight. Clyde, hardly a step behind him, managed to get a firm hold on Jimmie, dragged him out then vainly tried to rescue the younger boy.

It was all over in a second, but the search for Rayvoughn's body lasted 15 minutes. The Casualty ambulance arrived; Rescue Squad No. 1 screamed through the traffic with life-giving oxygen; crowds swarmed out of cars like flies and gaped at the searchers and at Clyde and Jimmie, huddled together on the rocks.

* * * *

At Gallinger Hospital, almost at this very moment, the failing mother of these three little boys was reviving with her husband's blood. Davis had just left the hospital, when Mrs. Davis weakly called for him again.

"I have a strange feeling," she said to the nurse. "I want to talk to him."

Rayvoughn, her youngest son, that moment was being hauled out of the water with a grappling hook. Forty minutes of artificial respiration was of no avail.

Rayvoughn Davis, 7, and his pet.

Jimmie and Clyde, huddled together on the rocks, asked tearfully, "Is he dead? Tell us the truth; is he dead?"

The elder Davis, gray-haired at 44, was opening the door of his barbershop when a reporter drove up. Davis' left arm, bandaged, was hanging stiffly at his side.

"You've just come from Gallinger, Mr. Davis?" He nodded.

"I—I hate to tell you, but your youngest boy has had an accident. He's at Casualty, and in pretty bad shape. But"—and this came out quickly—"the other two are safe."

Davis didn't say much. At Casualty he didn't say much, either. He saw his boy, then broke down and wept. "This will kill his mother," he sobbed. "How can I ever tell her?"

When Davis returned to the rooming-house home at 413 Second street southeast, a couple of children with tear-stained faces were curled up on one of the room's two beds.

"Tell us the truth, daddy," said Clyde, "tell us the truth" . . .

* * * *

The next visiting day at Gallinger is tomorrow. Mrs. Mary Butler, supervisor of female surgery, said last night that "Mrs. Davis has had a hard pull since her operation Friday. I've given orders to keep the newsboy from the ward—as this will be a very serious shock to her, if she hears of it."

Tomorrow, visiting day, Mrs. Davis will ask to see her three boys . . .

Fare Boosted By 5 Per Cent On Pullmans

Increase to Be Effective in Time for Bulk of Summer Travel.

Eastern Railroads Now Seeking 25% Raise in Coach Rates.

By William V. Nessly.

The Pullman Co. was granted permission by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to raise its fares 5 per cent, effective in time to catch the bulk of the heavy summer vacation travel.

The action was taken while Eastern railroads were presenting to the commission their new plea for an increase of coach fares from 2 cents to 2½ cents a mile.

And on another front in the carriers' far-flung efforts to improve their desperate financial position, roads of the entire country were making public, a comprehensive summary of their situation, designed to show that the proposed 15 per cent reduction in railroad wages is essential to keep more lines out of the hands of receivers.

Jones Slightly Optimistic.

A slightly improved rail outlook was reported, meanwhile, by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, who said there had been a minor upturn in passenger travel and in car loadings, but when he was asked whether there were indications that the roads might yet pull out of their present plight without extraordinary help, he shook his head negatively.

The Pullman increase will go into effect as soon as the new schedules are posted and the required ten days' notice is given. The company had asked a 10 per cent rise but the commission majority, though holding present revenue inadequate, declared that the larger raise would be "unjust and unreasonable." The commission granted authority for the increase in all of the company's charges, but suggested that upper berth fares be left unchanged.

Chairman M. W. Splawn concurred in the majority opinion granting the increase, but maintained that the full 10 per cent boost should be permitted for lower berths.

Commissioner Dissents.

Commissioner Frank McManamy dissented from the order, writing that "the Pullman Co. is reasonably prosperous in comparison with other industry, and the record does not justify any increase in present fares."

Railroad men seeking the increase in passenger coach fares were cheered somewhat by the Pullman order, particularly since one of their arguments had been based on the wide difference between coach fares and the present Pullman rates.

The roads offered a picture of declining revenues and rising costs to support their plea, once denied but recently reopened by the ICC.

$43,000,000 D.C. Building Bills Signed

Municipal, Federal and Slum Projects Will Be Speeded.

Alley Authority Studies Eight Sites for New Housing.

President Roosevelt yesterday cleared the way for speedy inauguration of a $43,000,000 construction program in the District as he signed three bills passed in the closing days of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

Simultaneously, members of the Alley Dwelling Authority personally surveyed eight prospective locations for housing projects expected to cost nearly $15,000,000. Construction of these units is made possible by the act enabling the Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow money from the United States Housing Authority and to extend its activities to areas outside alleys.

The second bill provides for a PWA loan of $9,982,500 to the District Government and an outright grant of $8,167,000 for muncipal buildings.

War Building Provided.

The third bill signed affecting the District is the second deficiency appropriation which, among other projects, allots $3,000,000 for beginning construction of a new War Department building and a similar sum for starting work on a structure to house the Social Security and Railroad Retirement boards.

Under terms of the PWA loan and grant, the Commissioners already have approved expenditure of nearly $4,000,000 for new schools; $2,750,000 for development of the municipal center at Judiciary Square; $1,500,000 for additions to the plant at Gallinger Hospital and Glen Dale Sanatorium; $2,750,000 for the National Guard Armory; $1,600,000 for a new jail, and $1,433,625 for new sewers.

Two Sources of Revenue.

The measure amending the alley dwelling act provides two sources of revenue for a large-scale program of slum clearance and low-cost housing in the District.

It enables the Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow from the housing authority on the same basis as other municipalities and States and authorizes the local housing agency to claim loans of $1,000,000 a year for a period of five years from the Treasury.

At the same time, PWA officials announced that the President had approved a $2,356,671 allocation to the Agriculture Department to be spent in completing projects at the Beltsville, Md., research center. The money will be used to develop projects beig conducted by the Bureaus of Animal and Dairy Industry, the Biological Survey, the Food and Drug Administration, the Forest Service, the Bureau of Plant Industry and the Soil Conservation Service. The largest single allotment, $850,000, will provide the Food and Drug Administration with

WPA Aide Urges Workers to Keep Friends in Power

Relief Alliance Told to 'Stick Together' by Williams.

Sen. King Brands Talk 'Improper'

Campaign Quiz's Chief to Examine Text of Speech.

Aubrey Williams, Depufy Works Progress Administrator, yesterday told a delegation of organized relief workers they should work to "keep our friends in power."

"We've got to stick together. We've got to keep our friends in power," Williams told representatives of the Workers Alliance. "I don't need to tell you. You know your friends very well. Just judge the folks who come and ask for your support by the crowd they run with."

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, immediately charged the speech was "made for the purpose of influencing a large number of relief employes in the elections."

Calls Remark "Improper."

"If Mr. Williams' remarks were such as reported to me, they were highly improper," said King. "I believe the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee will be required to investigate."

But Chairman Morris Sheppard, of the Senate investigating group now studying use of official influence and Federal funds in primaries and elections, declined to say what action his committee will take.

"I would want to see the entire text of Mr. Williams speech and study it, before I could comment," said Sheppard.

Will Study Copy of Talk.

Sheppard said he would try to get a quorum of his committee together today, but not in connection with Williams' remarks.

Although he said he would try to get a copy of the Williams address and study it, he said he wanted to make clear that he "is not a censor."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, who made two futile efforts in the Senate to enact statutory prohibitions on political use of relief funds, commented only:

"I have repeatedly made my position clear. I believe that the WPA and politics should be completely divorced."

Statement Is Second.

It was the second time in a month statements had been made by a WPA official involving a political attitude. A Senate outburst that finally culminated in power for the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee to investigate political use of relief funds followed an expression by Works Progress Admin-

Snell, Leader Of Minority, Quits House

Announces Decision to Devote More Time to 'Personal Affairs.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Retirement from Congress of House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, to "give more attention to my personal affairs," was announced yesterday by the 68-year-old Republican critic of everything bearing the New Deal label.

SNELL.

In a printed announcement that caught associates here by surprise, the man who for seven years has shepherded an ever-dwindling House minority said he will not be a candidate for re-election.

"The time comes when one's family and health must have some consideration," said Representative Snell, who revealed he had planned to retire four years ago.

His withdrawal, after 24 years in the House, brought a statement of

State Convention Slated to Shun Him Despite His Court Bill Fight.

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.

Indianapolis, June 27.—The Indiana State Republican organization will take no action at its convention this week to help Democratic Senator Frederick Van Nuys win re-election next fall, party officials said positively today.

Senator Van Nuys has been blacklisted by the New Deal and read out of his party by leaders of the Indiana Democratic organization because of his stand against the court enlargement bill a year ago.

Some Republicans outside Indiana and small groups within the State had sought to persuade the State organization either to refrain from nominating any Republican Senatorial candidate or at least to withhold action until after the Democratic State convention next month, when the Democratic indorsement is expected to be given to some candidate other than Van Nuys. It was suggested that the re-election of Senator Van Nuys would be a more effective attack on the New Deal even than the election of a Republican Senator.

Several county delegations will come to the opening of the Republican State convention tomorrow night pledged to do what they can to obtain action helpful to Van Nuys, but their efforts appeared doomed to failure.

Party leaders believe a Republican candidate has a good chance of election in a three-cornered fight

Failure of Clews Halts Search for McCormick Heir

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 27 (AP).—Search for missing Medill McCormick reached an apparent stalemate today with a complete absence of clews to his fate on storm-blown Sandia Peak.

Half of a contingent of 120 CCC enrollees were withdrawn tonight from the search for the 21-year-old publishing heir, and all but two or three of a dozen veteran mountain climbers prepared to return to their homes.

Today's search was hindered by sudden mountain rain squalls which beat against the mile-high peak and for the most part kept the cliff face clear of climbers. The hunt continued, however, in rocky arroyos and canyons at the foot of the mountain.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, the missing boy's mother, was at the mountain again at daylight, but Gov. Clyde Tingley was forced to leave the scene because of official business

Pay Act Signed; 200,000 to Get Raise Oct. 24

Unemployment Insurance Act for Rail Workers Also Ready.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt has signed the wage-hour-bill, thereby giving the "go ahead" signal for a vast experiment in putting a "floor" under pay rates and a "ceiling" over hours.

The signing was done without fanfare Saturday, but was not announced by White House officials until yesterday.

The act will go into operation October 24. On that date, officials said, some 200,000 persons receiving less than 25 cents an hour are to have their pay increased to 25 cents. Whether any court fight over the act will delay its operation has yet to be determined, however.

Provide for Rail Workers.

The act provides for the appointment of a wage-hour administrator, and well-informed officials said they expected the President to fill this post before he starts on his trip to the West July 7.

The act applies to industries in interstate commerce, with some exceptions. They will be required to pay a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour during the first year after October 24.

During the second year and five subsequent years the wage rate minimum will be 30 cents, and at the end of seven years after the

'Babs' Hutton Divorce Asked In Copenhagen

Identity of Plaintiff Is Not Revealed; Must Wait a Year or More.

By the Associated Press.

Copenhagen, Denmark, June 27.—A divorce suit on behalf of Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow and his heiress wife, the former Barbara Hutton, was submitted to the Copenhagen court tonight.

No hearing date was fixed for the case.

The marital split of the 5-and-10 cent store heiress and her blue-blooded Danish husband was carried into court after a conference of attorneys representing the count and countess with the minister of justice.

It was not evident immediately after the filing of the suit whether the countess or her husband brought the proceedings.

The suit was submitted to the city court and, under Danish law, an indefinite period ranging from a year to two years must elapse before a final decree.

Attorneys said the count may go to London and submit to arrest on a warrant obtained by his heiress wife.

The British warrant, issued last week after the countess visited Bow Street Police Court and made a sworn statement, was understood to call for the Danish count's appearance in court on a restraining order prohibiting him from interfering with the custody of their 2-year-old son, Lance.

Expert Urges Civil Service Rating for All

Dr. White Also Sees Need of Increased Funds for Commission.

The executive orders blanketing more than 100,000 Federal workers into the classified civil service yesterday drew from Dr. Leonard D. White, former Civil Service Commissioner and now head of the University of Chicago's department of political science, the declaration that legislation should be enacted to extend civil service laws to the remainder of the service.

In a telegram to The Post, Dr. White said:

"The executive orders issued by President Roosevelt extending the merit system represents a major accomplishment toward improved public service. This bold and courageous step should be followed by legislation authorizing extension of civil service laws to the remainder of the Federal service, and by increased appropriations to the Civil Service Commission to permit proper administration of the new duties.

"My personal observation throughout the country convinces me that the people cordially approve the President's action and want politics kept out of administration."

Meanwhile, Civil Service stuck its roots further into the Government with the approval by President Roosevelt yesterday of an act extending the merit system provisions to first, second and third class postoffices. The move opened the way for about 14,500 postmasters to obtain lifetime jobs.

The incumbents will serve out their present specified appointments and thereafter appointments will be

New Deal Pursues Policies Liberals Fight, Says Hoover

San Jose, Calif., June 27 (U.P.).—Former President Herbert Hoover in a speech construed as a reply to President Roosevelt's fireside chat appeal for support of "liberals," tonight said the New Deal has engaged in practices which "liberals have fought for centuries."

Speaking in his home district at a political rally for the Congressional candidacy of John Z. Anderson, San Benito County rancher, Hoover assailed his successor for "weakening the personal liberties and protection for minorities which have been the foundation of liberal tradition."

Nye and Langer Cap 5-Year Fight In Primary Today

Bismarck, N. Dak., June 27 (AP).—Voters will decide the winner of a five-year fight between Gov. William Langer and U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye, seeking the Republican Senatorial nomination in tomorrow's primary election.

The former friends have laid national issues aside and have fought on State issues, symbolic of the internal strife in the Nonpartisan League dominant since it regained control of State government in 1932.

Nye has centered his fight on what he called "Langerism," while Langer has charged Nye with making a racket out of peace.

3 Aides of Davey Indicted for Levy On Ohio Employes

Columbus, Ohio, June 27 (AP).—A special grand jury late today indicted seven persons, including three aides of Gov. Martin L. Davey, on charges of violating civil service laws in soliciting contributions from State employes for the Governor's third-term campaign fund.

Those indicted included Davey's finance director, M. Ray Allison, and his campaign fund treasurer, J. Freer Bittinger, former House speaker, and Thomas E. Dye, assistant State purchasing agent.

Dye, prominent Urbana, Ohio, Democrat, for three years State party chairman, declared:

"Those indictments don't amount to a tinker's dam. I never solicited anyone for anything."

5 Hurt in Traffic When Storm Drenches City, Ends Heat Wave

Auto accidents in which at least five persons were seriously injured, flooded cellars, damaged property, traffic jams and drenched pedestrians last night were the results of the season's most violent rainstorm.

During the storm an automobile crashed off Defense Highway and pinned its driver between the steering wheel and the door where he lay helpless for 45 minutes while members of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad cut away the door with hack-saws.

A machine, whose driver was blinded by the rain, struck and seriously injured a Washington rabbi and his wife as they were crossing at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

Two men who collapsed at their work were given hospital treatment for heat prostration. They were Reuben N. Finch, 39, of 1709 M street northwest, an employe of the Capital Transit Co., and John Scott, 26, colored, 2358 Champlain street northwest.

The rain, which began falling at about 3:40 p. m., smashed a three-day heat wave, but the Weather Bureau last night predicted higher temperatures for today and tomorrow.

The mercury dropped ten degrees in an hour. It was 82—the day's

Wampler Witnesses Describe Drinking Party Before Slaying

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

La Plata, Md., June 27.—A Charles County fisherman was warned "not to mention" what he saw at the Fenwick, Md., estate of T. Morris Wampler the day Charles Adams, 71-year-old, one-eyed handyman, was found slain, a jury in Circuit Court was told here today.

As the former Washington criminal lawyer and his wife faced trial on manslaughter charges, scenes of wild disorder at the Wampler home on April 29—the day of the slaying—were described by numerous residents of the fashionable summer community.

From Myer Swann, tall, weather-bronzed Fenwick fisherman, State's Attorney Edward Edelen drew the rather reluctant admission that he had been admonished by Mrs. Wampler not to repeat what he heard or saw after she had summoned him to the death scene.

Swann said he and a companion were hailed by Mrs. Wampler and a sister of the dead man and asked to assist in carrying Wampler into the house from a spot where he had fallen on the front lawn.

"She said there had been some sort of a scrap," the young fisher-

Split-ups Often Best, Business, New Deal Agree

'Shirtsleeve' Conferees in Closer Accord Than They Expected.

By the Associated Press.

General agreement that many large corporations ought to be broken into smaller ones, it was disclosed yesterday, has developed in the conversations betwen groups of big businessmen and Administration economists.

Prentiss L. Coonley, who left a New York brokerage firm to arrange the informal meetings, said they had produced almost unanimous acceptance of these principles:

"Bigness" isn't always efficient, and generally a consolidated business colossus doesn't earn as much money as its units earned separately.

Business must find methods of taking care of dismissed employes more adequately.

Hostility Vanishes.

These, Coonley said, were just a few of the things that brought no argument from either side. It's proof, he declared, that when presumably hostile men get to know each other, they are not nearly at such odds as they had imagined.

The meetings have been at the homes of Coonley, an aide to the business advisory council of the Commerce Department, and Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

The guests have ranged from men in their thirties to gray-heads in their late sixties. First there is dinner, and then conversation—once as late as 3 a. m.

Some of the men sit in shirt sleeves. Seldom is anything put to a vote; everyone merely expresses his opinion in turn. Usually they sit in a single group, but last Friday night Chairman Edward R. Stettinius of United States Steel and Securities Commissioner Jerome Frank wandered into the garden to swap ideas.

In some of the discussions, the group has considered phases of the monopoly problem, which is to be investigated by a committee of three Senators, three Representatives and six Federal officials. The committee will hold its first meeting later this week, and members predicted Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, would be elected chairman.

Punishment Not Aim.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, one of the members, said yesterday:

"We are not trying to punish anyone, reward anyone, condemn anyone or bless anyone. The committee's job is to get facts. A man seeking facts doesn't carry a torch and he doesn't carry a whip.

"The investigation should not further chastize business as has been done. It also should refrain from pushing the Borah-O'Mahoney licensing bill."

Senators O'Mahoney and Borah (Republican), of Idaho, have proposed that companies doing interstate business be incorporated by the Federal Government instead of by the States.

Borah said he would make no attempt to convince the committee that it should adopt the Federal licensing method of dealing with monopoly if other methods were proved to be better.

5 in Scottsboro Case To Ask for Pardons

Decatur, Ala., June 27 (AP).—A defense bid to end the "Scottsboro case" was disclosed today when the Decatur Daily published an advertisement giving notice pardons would be asked by the five colored men now under sentence.

The advertisement was published in accordance with Alabama law requiring public notice of intention to seek pardon. In Montgomery, Gov. Graves declined comment.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Award to Judge Allen

Bolton Landing, N. Y., June 27 (AP). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt presented the national achievement award for women tonight to Judge Florence E. Allen, of Cleveland, Ohio.

In accepting the medal at a conference of the Omega National Sorority, Judge Allen told the delegates, "I treasure this emblem more than I can possibly express, and treasure it doubly because it is from the hand of one who, in her own right, is the First Lady of the Land."

Sen. Lee Plans Bill Allowing Farmers to Raise All They Please, Dividing Home, Alien Markets.

A new farm program that would allow a farmer to plant and market all he pleased will be offered at the next session of Congress, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, told the Associated Press.

LEE.

The Oklahoman said he was trying, at the request of many Senators, to combine features of his domestic allotment proposal and a program sponsored by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, to separate the home and foreign markets. Under the Lee proposal every cotton farmer would be assigned a share of the supply needed in this country. The Government would pay him a premium or bounty on this allotment, based on the difference between market prices and a "parity" or "fair exchange" price. The farmer could grow and market all he pleased but would receive the bounty only on his domestic allotment.

The McAdoo program would fix the price on domestic cotton and prohibit dealing in it at less. The surplus would be taken by the Government and exported at whatever price could be obtained.

Lee said he favored processing taxes on any products benefitted by his program.

Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, yesterday charged in a statement that the 3.3 per cent unemployment insurance tax "is acting as a great drawback" to re-employment. "It is another example," he added, "of how the social security of the working man has been destroyed by the poorly considered programs of the Roosevelt Administration.

The New Yorker said that at the end of December the amount in the trust fund was $633,825,937.61. Receipts for the next five months were placed at $364,402,673.20, while disbursements to the States in the five months were $159,710,000.

Down to April 30, he added, only $100,932,980 reached the beneficiaries.

"In other words," the statement continued, "during the period when unemployment was the greatest, we were taking out of the employer twice as much in taxes as was being used to pay benefits to the employes. . . .

"It is not a benefit to the workingmen to have a fund of $836,000,000 piled up in the Treasury, allegedly for his benefit in unemployment insurance when the working man can never get this money under the operations of the law."

Indicating that he may have had experience himself with the hazardous task of raising turkeys, President Roosevelt yesterday issued a veto statement that deprived a turkey grower of $516.12 voted by Congress.

J. G. Bucklin, Rehoboth, Mass., was to have received the sum for 243 turkey eggs destroyed by a blast by WPA workers.

But the President, disapproving, wrote:

"Payment of the amount proposed assumes that, but for the blasting, each egg would have hatched, which is extremely questionable; that had each egg hatched, there would have been a loss of only 10 per cent in the number of fowls raised to a marketable growth, which is also questionable; and that each fowl placed on the market would have brought an average of $6, which is a further speculation."

Hopkins Visiting James Roosevelt

Rochester, Minn., June 27 (AP).—Mrs. James Roosevelt, wife of the President's son, and Harry Hopkins, Federal WPA administrator, arrived today by train to visit young Roosevelt, who is undergoing examination at the Mayo Clinic.

Hopkins planned to remain a day, then return to Washington. Mrs. Roosevelt expected to remain until her husband leaves the hospital.

Locher Is Recommended For D. C. Commissioner

John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, was recommended for District Commissioner yesterday by the Building Laborers' and Hod Carriers' Local Unions Nos. 74, 745 and 1079.

In a letter to President Roosevelt, George Morgan, secretary of the union, said Locher was "particularly fitted because of his training and experience in the field of labor, as well as in the broader field of civic administration and civic developments.

Coal Man Claims Union Tried to Shoot Him

London, Ky., June 27 (AP).—Charles S. Guthrie, a coal operator, testified today the United Mine Workers of America attempted to shoot him and members of his family in 1931.

Guthrie, general manager of the Harlan Fuel Co., gave this testimony in the trial of Harlan County Coal Co.'s executives and present and former law officials on Federal charges of conspiracy to violate the Wagner labor act. Guthrie and the company are among the defendants.

Shaft Dedicated By Prince Bertil And Roosevelt

Wilmington Monument Hailed as Token of Swedish-U. S. Amity.

Hyde Park, June 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt returned home tonight with a batch of unsigned legislation that requires action this week.

Traveling by train from Wilmington, Del., the President reached here at 6:20 p. m. (E. S. T.) and motored to his family's estate.

The bills—around 100 of them—were those left after the President signed more than 130 over the week-end in Washington.

The President will motor to New York Thursday for two speeches. Returning by motor he will entertain members of the Swedish Royal family at his home on Friday and Saturday. He will go by train from Hyde Park to Gettysburg, Pa., Sunday to participate in the dedication of an eternal light on the famous battlefield.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and Prince Bertil of Sweden, dedicating a monument to America's first Swedish colonists, while a steady rain fell, pledged continuation of the Swedish-American good will which has endured for a century and a half.

"We shall be reminded of the unbroken friendship betwen Sweden and America by this monument," the prince said as he presented the shaft, raised in honor of the handful of Swedes and Finns who sailed up the Delaware in 1638.

Crown Prince Still Ill.

The President welcomed the Prince and Crown Princess Louise to the site where the colonists, led by Peter Minuit, landed three centuries ago to establish the first settlement in Delaware.

Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, whose place 26-year-old Prince Bertil took, sent "regrets" from the motorship Kungsholm that illness had kept him from the ceremonies. He will go to New York tomorrow for further examination.

A loudspeaker system carried the voice of the crown prince to a crowd in the center of Wilmington.

"You represent a true friendship under which we have lived from the earliest times unmarred by any rift, unbroken by any misunderstanding," the President said in greeting the royal party.

Hull Praises Swedes.

The President accepted, "in behalf of the people of the United States," the monument contributed by the people of Sweden:

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, speaking in the afternoon, said Sweden and Finland stand out among the nations "just and wise enough to respect the legitimate rights and aspirations of others."

The Swedish and Finnish delegations spent the evening hours at a nearby estate and then returned to board the Kungsholm, scheduled to carry them on an overnight trip to Philadelphia, where Pennsylvania's tercentenary opens tomorrow.

Dr. Kress on Tour.

Dr. Andrew J. Kress, professor of urban sociology at Georgetown University, left Washington yesterday to study housing, social settlements and co-operatives in London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin and Rome. Mrs. Kress went with him.

Mr. Roosevelt's Address

Wilmington, Del., June 27 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's address at Christina Park here today follows:

Your royal highness:

This is a day of happy significance to three nations. I welcome you, for you represent a true friendship under which we have lived from the earliest times unmarred by any rift, unbroken by any misunderstanding. You are thrice welcome to our shores.

It is a matter of keen sorrow to me that his royal highness the crown prince is unable to be at this historic spot today, but all of us pray that his recovery will be speedy and complete—and I personally look forward to welcoming him and his family at Hyde Park or at Washington the end of this week.

I accept with profound gratitude, in behalf of the people of the United States, this noble monument placed here through the generosity of the people of Sweden. I am confident that to generations yet unborn in Sweden and the United States it will typify close association and continued good will between our two nations.

I am fortunate in having personal association with the colony of New Sweden, for one of my ancestors, William Beekman, served as vice director or governor of the colony of New Sweden on the Delaware River from 1658 to 1663. And I am also proud that Swedish blood runs in my veins, for another of my ancestors Martin Hoffman, was an early Swedish settler of New Amsterdam."

My friend, the Governor of Delaware, holds office in direct official succession from the governors of New Sweden — which reminds me of a recent rhyme descriptive of the famous Gov. John Printz, that doughty pioneer who is said to have tipped the scales at 300 pounds.

"No Gov. of Del.
Before or since
Has weighed as much
As Johan Printz."

Your royal highness, it is a privilege to make grateful acknowledgement of the outstanding contributions made to our national life by men and women of Swedish blood. To this spot came the pioneers. But in the succeeding centuries tens of thousands of others have come to our shores and added their strength and their fine qualities of citizenship to the American Nation. In every phase of our history, in every endeavor —in commerce and industry, in science and art, in agriculture, in education and religion, in statecraft and government, they have well played their part.

Nor have we as Americans forgotten that after the War of the Revolution, Sweden was the first neutral European power to negotiate a treaty of amity and trade with our young and struggling nation. All these things we recall today with grateful hearts.

And to you who are here as representatives of the people of Finland I extend an equally hearty welcome. Men and women from Finland have also contributed greatly to our American civilization. Finland, small in size but mighty in honor, occupies an especially warm place in the American heart.

Sweden, Finland and the United States will continue their service in the days to come in the cause of friendship and of peace among the nations of the world.

Aide's Death Puts Off Argentine Fetes

Because of the sudden death of First Secretary Hector Diaz Leguizamo, the Argentine Embassy yesterday canceled all social events scheduled for the next few days. The Embassy's calendar was unusually crowded this week because of the wedding festivities leading up to the marriage tomorrow of Second Secretary Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler and Miss Margot Garrett, Washington socialite.

The body of Senor Leguizamon, who died early Sunday after a dinner honoring the prospective bridegroom, is lying in state at Gawler's funeral establishment, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Mass will be sung at 11 a. m. today in St. Matthew's Church. The body will be shipped to Buenos Aires.

Harvester Company Will Close 9 Plants

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—The International Harvester Co. announced today that nine of its farm implement plants would be closed for all or a part of July "in order to work down inventories" and to permit employes to take their paid vacations.

Plants to be closed for the entire month are situated at Auburn, N. Y., Canton, Ill.; Richmond, Ind.; Rock Falls, Ill.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Milwaukee, Wis., and Rock Island, Ill.

Dr. Smith to Give D. C. Heads Story

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, ousted superintendent of the National Training School for Girls today will plead her case for reinstatement before the District Commissioners, it was learned yesterday.

Officials in the District Building revealed Dr. Smith will present a brief pointing out the reasons for reinstatement.

"She is appearing on her own initiative," an official commented. "We will merely listen to her story."

Dr. Smith was dismissed last October and was immediately replaced by Dr. James Lewald, who is now acting superintendent of the institution.

Optometrists Pick Kraskin.

Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin, of 6501 Brookville road, Chevy Chase, Md., was elected president of the International Association of Boards of Examiners in Optometry at the annual meeting in Richmond yesterday before the opening of the forty-first annual congress of the American Optometric Association.

Cannon Libel Suit Against Tinkham Is Lost on Appeal

The $500,000 libel suit of Bishop James Cannon, jr., against Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, was quashed yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals.

Affirming a decision of Justice Peyton Gordon in the United States District Court, the appellate court granted a motion by Attorneys Roger J. Whiteford and P. H. Marshall to strike out the bill of exceptions.

The lower court had directed a verdict on February 5, 1937, in Tinkham's favor, holding that a member of Congress could not divest himself of congressional immunity.

Tinkham had asasiled Bishop Cannon on the House floor as "a shameless violator of the Federal corrupt practices act."

Internal Revenue Bureau Will Drop 850 Clerical Jobs

About 850 employes in the 64 collection districts of the Internal Revenue Bureau will be dropped from the rolls Thursday, officials disclosed yesterday, because of reductions in the work of checking social security tax returns and handling claims for refunds of processing taxes.

The orders, sent out June 11 by commissioner Guy T. Helvering to take effect at the end of the month, affect all of the collection districts in the country, in which a staff of about 8,000, appointed by the collectors, has been employed on the two lines of work.

George J. Schoeneman, chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau division in charge of this work, said those affected were chiefly clerical employes, typists and calculating machine operators.

9 Jurors Picked In Secret for Scheid's Trial

50 Veniremen Weeded Out One by One in Private Jury Room.

With selection of jurors far from complete, the trial of Edwin Scheid, 23-year-old Falls Church policeman charged with the "speed" murder of Theodore B. Daugherty, was adjourned at 4:15 p. m. yesterday in Arlington Courthouse.

Of 50 veniremen, all but 9 were eliminated. Virginia law requires 20 eligible jurors, from whom Commonwealth's attorney and defense counsel are privileged to "strike" four each. An additional 64 have been summoned to appear when the trial is resumed today at 10 a. m.

Examination of jurors was conducted in secret, a procedure believed unprecedented in county history. When Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas objected to a question put to a juror by defense counsel, Judge Walter T. McCarthy ordered both lawyers and the lanky, blond defendant to accompany him to a jury room.

Jury Picked Secretly.

Members of the panel were called from the jury box, one at a time, and examined in the jury room, because, according to Defense Counsel Frank L. Gall, questions asked were such as might prejudice other prospective jurors if answered in open court.

Principal cause for disqualification was a preconceived opinion as to the defendant's guilt or innocence. One man was dismissed because he lived only half a mile from the scene of the shooting, which occurred March 20 on the Lee highway.

The judge attributed the difficulty in jury selection to "public sentiment" felt in the case.

Seated just behind Scheid were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scheid, of Cherrydale, who joined their son in conferences with Ball during recesses. Also in the courtroom was Herbert Knox, 24, also a Falls Church policeman, who is charged with "feloniously abetting" Scheid.

Victim's Widow in Court.

Mrs. Lillian Daugherty, widow of the 31-year-old Washington musician, with members of her family and a woman friend, took a front row seat during the afternoon session. With her was her mother, Mrs. George C. Frazier, who lives in Falls Church near the Scheids, and will be a prosecution witness.

Defense counsel is expected to contend Daugherty was shot accidentally as the two officers attempted to halt his car by firing at the tires. A ballistics test disclosed the fatal bullet was fired by Scheid.

With only three witnesses subpenaed by the defense, Ball has indicated that he will call several additional persons to testify. Those summoned are J. E. Burke, F. L. Mason and G. L. Norris, all Washington policemen.

In his attempt to prove Scheid deliberately murdered the Washington motorist, Douglas will present more than a dozen witnesses. In addition to Mrs. Frazier, her husband and her son, Harry Frazier, he has summoned Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barghausen, neighbors of the Fraziers; Robert Albertis, before whose Lee highway home the schooting occurred; three Arlington County policemen, who were on duty at the time of the fatal episode; County Coroner W. C. Welburn and J. F. Bean, driver of a milk wagon.

Scheid and Knox, both of whom have been suspended, are under $2,500 bond. If Scheid is acquitted, the charge against Knox probably will be dropped.

Deputy Denies He Slew Doctor

South Paris, Me., June 27 (U.P.).—Former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll tonight challenged the State to test him with a lie detector as he protested through his attorneys he is innocent of any implication in the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield last October.

In a statement made through his counsel, former Attorney General Clyde R. Chapman, Carroll insisted that a drug ring which had access to the home of Paul (Buddy) Dwyer, serving a life sentence for the murder, killed Littlefield.

Carroll, silent since he was indicted last Friday, said his drug ring theory was supported by "the fact Dr. Littlefield was known as a drug addict."

Labor Board Wipes Away Charge Firm Ruled Ky. Elections

Catlettsburg, Ky., June 27 (AP).—Examiner George Bokat, of the National Labor Relations Board, erased from the record today union charges the American Rolling Mill Co. dominated municipal elections in Ashland, Ky.

The examiner's action followed a challenge by Donald R. Richberg that the charges were "flagrantly unconstitutional."

"The board does not forbid exercise of citizenship in violation of the constitutions of of the United States and Kentucky," Bokat said.

Richberg, former NRA administrator, appearing as counsel for the company, had said:

"The National Labor Relations Board must keep its hands off the ballot box. It must not molest a free press and must keep hands off throttling of speech."

Brentwood Elects Russell to Council

James R. Russell was elected councilman for the Third Ward at an annual election of municipal officers at Brentwood, Md., yesterday. Russell will succeed John M. Link whom he defeated by a vote of 69 to 21. Franklin H. Ways, also a candidate for the office, received 63 votes in the election.

Percy F. Fulton defeated John Abell to return to office as councilman for the Fourth Ward. The vote was 68 to 46. The elections are for two-year periods.

In an uncontested election in University Park, Mayor T. Earle Bourne received 19 complimentary votes to remain in office. Re-elected as councilmen for the First and Third wards respectively were Albert W. Brown and Ralph M. Arnold.

Murder Is Seen In 'Hanging' of Lovelorn Girl

Virginia Sheriff Declares She Couldn't Have Knotted Noose.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., June 27.—Murder and suicide were debated by Clarke County authorities tonight as theories of the manner in which 17-year-old Wanda Whetzell May, pretty brunette, died on the farm of Richard H. McAtee, of Berryville, 2½ miles west of here.

Her body was found at 6 a. m. Sunday, hanging from a beam in a barn on the farm on which she had been living with Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Locke and Locke's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Edmunds.

Today friends of the girl learned of her marriage about a year ago to Wilson May, of Hardy County, W. Va. The information was given to Voyne Omps, Winchester undertaker who has charge of the body, by her brother, Jason Whetzell, of Grimes, Va. Authorities were told the couple had not lived together.

Dr. Carroll M. Iden, of Berryville, Clarke County coroner, tonight recorded the case as a suicide. He said the girl had been despondent for several months, during which time she had attempted to kill herself with pills that she presumed were poisonous, but which later proved to be harmless.

He stated she died of a broken neck caused by hanging, but declared that the case was not necessarily closed by his findings.

Clarke County Sheriff W. W. Smallwood, sr., also of Berryville, declared he had reason to believe the girl may have been murdered. He cited as a motive reports of her love for a young farmer, an affection which the man reputedly told her he could no longer reciprocate.

RFC Offers Aid For Buying Big Private Utilities

Knoxville Gets $5,800,000 for Purchase of Tennessee Company.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones last night offered the resources of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance large scale public purchases of private utilities in huge areas of the South, Midwest and Far West.

He started the program by lending $5,800,000 to Knoxville, Tenn., to buy the distributing system of the Tennessee Public Service Co. in Knox County. It was the first loan of its kind ever made by the RFC.

The Knoxville deal is the first in a contemplated series of purchases by the Tennessee Valley Authority and municipalities in that area to end the problem of competition between public and private utility capital.

Jones said he had "inquiries" but no formal applications for loans from municipalities around the huge new Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams on the Columbia River and the Fort Peck Dam in Montana.

He also said a proposed $100,000,000 deal in Nebraska would be eligible for RFC money. The proposal has been made that three PWA power projects there buy out all the major private utilities in the State.

The chairman said he already had sent an agent to the Columbia River area to investigate the loan prospects. He made it plain, however, that his offer was limited to areas where Federal or PWA power developments created a special competitive problem and that he was not inviting municipalities elsewhere to apply.

Thomas Urges Federal Aid to U. S. Education

Deprecates Fears of Central Control and Religious Disputes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 27.—The fears of many educators that Federal aid might lead to strict Federal control of education and that State aid to parochial and other nonpublic schools might violate the principle of separation of church and State were deprecated today at meetings of the National Education Association by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Representative Noah M. Mason (Republican), of Illinois.

"American education, based upon the great public school system, nevertheless, recognizes the place for the home, the church and private organizations in our educational system," Senator Thomas said at the first general evening session in the New York Hippodrome.

"I have gone over, very carefully, the provisions of the Harrison-Thomas-Fletcher bill," Representative Mason said at the tenth life-membership dinner at the Astor. "Neither in the report of the President's advisory committee on education nor in the bill can I find what the opponents of the program claim is to be found there, namely (a) dangerous precedents that would be established, tending to centralize control over education; (b) a violation of constitutional provisions concerning the relationship between Government and religion."

An honorary life membership was presented at this dinner to Miss Virginia Sappington, 19-year-old teacher, of Chetopa, Kans., whose presence of mind and courage saved the lives of her 20 pupils when a tornado hit the school in March. The presentation was made by J. W. Crabtree, secretaary emeritus of the association.

Mayor LaGardia, in an address of welcome at the first general session of the convention, repeated his recent request to the home rule committee of the constitutional convention to place control and support of the city school system entirely in the hands of the State.

However, Miss Emily A. Tarbell, a classroom teacher from Syracuse, N. Y., who responded for the N. E. A., begged the members of her profession to combat the popular cry "Oh, let the Government do it." The 3,500 teachers who filled the theater were so cool to the proposal to make education completely a State function that the Mayor publicly commented on the opposition.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman greeted the delegates in the name of the State.

Woburn, Mass., June 27 (AP).—Daniel J. The President also approved a $2,690,000 allocation for Geological Survey projects and a $1,055,350 sum for use by the Bureau of Fisheries. The Bureau of Fisheries allocation includes $10,000 for repairing and improving the fish cultural station at Fort Belvoir, Va., and $15,000 for improvements at a similar station at Wytheville, Va. Projects being directed by the bureau are scattered through 39 States.

Money allotted to the Geological Survey, most of it to be used in topographical mapping and for surveys of floods and droughts, includes $28,000 for use in Maryland for that purpose and $38,000 for use in Virginia. In addition, $10,000 will be used for construction and repair of river-measurement stations in Maryland and $15,000 for the same purpose in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy received $42,288,750 yesterday to spend on war vessels, a dirigible and a public works program.

The money was part of the $275,403,263 deficiency appropriation signed by President Roosevelt. The balance will go to meet deficiencies in appropriations for other Federal departments.

A portion of the Navy's fund—$16,050,000—will be used to begin work on the expansion program authorized by Congress. The bill carries funds for two new battleships, an aircraft carrier, two light cruisers, a destroyer tender, a large seaplane tender, two small seaplane tenders, two oil tankers, a minelayer, and two fleet tugs.

Also included were $500,000 for preliminary work on a new $3,000,000 dirigible and $16,252,000 for improvement of shipbuilding and repair facilities.

now looming as a likely possibility if Senator Van Nuys makes good his threat to run as an independent Democrat.

Furthermore, as Arch N. Bobbitt, chairman of the Republican State central committee has pointed out, Senator Van Nuys, despite his opposition to the court bill, nevertheless has voted for too much of the New Deal program to be acceptable to the Republican organization.

In the buzzing corridors and headquarters of various Republican candidates in the Claypool Hotel, one heard no talk today of Van Nuys. Interest centered in the spirited bidding for delegates by the five men who are seeking the Republican nomination to run for Senator Van Nuy's seat.

Heading the list is James E. Watson, 73-year-old white-haired veteran, who was first elected to Congress in 1894. He served 16 years in the Senate before his retirement from political life in 1933 and was Republican majority leader of the Senate during his last term. He will almost certainly receive a large vote, much of it a "courtesy vote," on the first ballot Wednesday, but his age and his enemies within the party stand in the way of his attempt to stage a come-back.

A majority, 881 delegate votes, is required for nomination.

Watson's rivals include a newspaper publisher and three lawyers. All four tonight claimed assurances of sufficient delegates to win the nomination.

Raymond E. Willis, 63, has been publisher of a country weekly in Angola, seat of Steuben County in northeastern Indiana, for 40 years. He has had fairly widespread support in the country press, but is not widely known.

Probably the best-known figure opposing Watson is Walter F. Bossert, 52, of Liberty, in Watson's congressional district. From 1923 to 1926, Bossert was head of the Ku Klux Klan in 18 States north of the Mason-Dixon Line.

The two remaining candidates are Oliver Starr, 54-year-old Gary attorney, and Clarence E. (Dick) Wills, 51, and also an attorney, of Kokomo. Of the five candidates, the latter two alone appear to have any claim to the title of Progressive Republicans.

Starr has served as prosecutor of Lake County (Gary) and boasts of the number of labor unions he has represented in court.

Wills is a director and legal counsel to Kokomo's one bank and has been an active party worker for 25 years. He also has been city judge and city attorney, but, as is true of all the senatorial candidates but Watson, he has never held a Statewide office.

Admittedly, the Republican Party cannot hope to match the financial strength of the McNutt-Townsend Democratic State machine or fight on even terms with Federal support. With its "Two Percent Club," the Democratic organization has reputedly built up a $1,000,000 campaign fund on contributions from State office holders scaled to 2 per cent of their salaries.

This fund primarily is to help Paul V. McNutt, Governor General of the Philippines and former Governor of Indiana, to win the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1940. If funds are needed to keep the party in power until then, however, there is little doubt that they will be made available.

A high official of the Republican State organization said today that he thought substantial campaign funds to aid the Republican Senatorial candidate in Indiana could be raised in the East and that several of the candidates for the nomination have already been considering the best way to make "a touch" on wealthy Eastern Republicans.

Snell Retires From Congress; Led Minority for Seven Years

"very great and keen regret" from Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee.

A race for his House Republican leadership post is expected to follow. Among those likely to be candidates to succeed Snell are Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, present assistant minority leader; Representative Mapes, of Michigan, 26 years in the House and ranking minority member of the Rules Committee; Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee; Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, and Representative Fish, of New York.

Coincident with the announcement, the executive committee of the Republican National Committee in session here gave a vote of confidence to Chairman Hamilton, and predicted "the Republican Party this fall will make substantial gains in all parts of the country, electing Governors in a number of States, as well as substantially increasing the Republican strength in the United States Senate and the House of Representatives."

The vote of confidence in Hamilton followed a week-end attack by Representative Fish, who demanded Hamilton's retirement and suggested the National Committee turn over the Republican Congressional Committee "some of the money it is wasting."

Of the committee's $352,193 in gross receipts between January 1 and May 31, he said $167,121 went back to the States leaving $185,072 for the National committee. Of this amount, he said $63,000 went to the Republican Congressional committee and $15,000 to the Senatorial committee, while the National committee was spending $80,970. Goodspeed said a larger part of the funds will go to the Congressional and Senatorial committees as the campaign progresses. This month, he said the Congressional committee will receive another $35,000 and the Senatorial committee $5,000.

Hamilton was interviewed by reporters after the executive committee at an all-day meeting received reports from committee division heads and discussed plans for this year's campaign.

The Republican National Committee chairman predicted his party would gain a "minimum" of 35 to 45 seats in the House and he personally thought 80 was "not unreasonable." He said the largest Republican gains should take place in the industrial belt between Illinois and New York, and the largest single gains may take place in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Prospects of a coalition between anti-Administration Democrats and Republicans were not discussed by the committee, said Hamilton, who added that coalition possibilities would depend on the outcome of the primaries.

Subject to action by the full committee, the executive group approved three replacements in the National committee. They were: Kenneth Simpson, of New York, to take the place of Charles Hilles; State Senator William K. Knowland, of California, to replace Earl Warren, and Mrs. E. L. Moulton, of New Mexico, to succeed Mrs. R. F. Baker.

Representative Snell was out of town when his retirement announcement was issued by his office, but friends said he has no plans to seek the Senatorial seat vacated by the death of Senator Copeland. They said he enjoyed his work in the House but had no desire to be a new member of the Senate.

In private life, Snell is a director of Gould Pumps, Inc., at Seneca Falls, N. Y.; of the Agricultural Insurance Co., of Watertown, N. Y., and of the Northern New York Trust Co., at Watertown, and is president of the board of trustees of Clarkson College, at Pottsdam. It was said he will devote his time to these interests and to travel.

"In retiring from Congress I shall in no degree lose my interest in the future political and economic welfare of our nation and I shall continue to work, in every available manner, for the further development and prosperity of the North Country which has so signally honored me for so many years," he said.

He said he had received letters and telegrams "from all parts of the four counties" he represents urging him to again stand for election, but "the public responsibilities which have been mine for a number of years past have been exceedingly heavy and my own business accordingly has been very greatly neglected."

Starting life in the lumber camps and as a bookkeeper in a pulp mill, Snell before he reached middle age had acquired a competence in business. He had never held political office before he was elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress. He had never been since in political danger in his own district, and in 1936 was elected by his largest majority.

As chairman of the House Rules Committee, during the Speakership of Longworth, he wielded an increasingly influential role in party councils, as a member of the "triumvirate"—Longworth, Snell and John Q. Tilson, Republican leader. After Longworth's death, he wrested the leadership from Tilson, December 7, 1931.

As his party was even then in the House minority, he has never had a chance at the coveted office of Speaker—logical stepping stone from the leadership. A fighting conservative, the New Deal was anathema to him, and as Roosevelt landslides reduced the Republican membership to its lowest point in history, he kept up a bitter attack against "waste" and for sound money and a balanced budget.

Keep 'Friends' In Power, WPA Workers Urged

istrator Hopkins on the Iowa primaries.

Hopkins had said that if he were a voter in the Iowa primaries, he would vote for Representative Wearin, as against Senator Gillette. In the primary that followed Gillette was nominated.

President Roosevelt in his fireside chat last Friday night reserved his own right as "head of the Democratic Party to speak in some primaries for "liberal" candidates.

Speech Is Applauded.

David Lasser, national president of the Workers Alliance, led the delegation of relief workers to the WPA seeking restoration of some wage cuts. Williams did not specifically refer to the approaching primaries and elections in telling the workers to support their "friends."

His remarks brought stormy applause from the delegation. Lasser replied that he had the conviction that "the people who are running the show" were his friends.

Williams told the workers he thought the President's speech Friday night "was wonderful."

"There would have been many things straightened out if he had received the support that he should have received," he said of the President. "It is going to take time and it is going to require an awful lot of stick-to-itiveness to get the thing done. But I believe we can work out this problem."

The WPA official said he was a firm believer in organization of workers, and expressed hope that the Workers Alliance will expand. He said he hoped "the organization of the unemployed people in America will include all of the unemployed people of America."

Hopkins' announcement Sunday of wage increases for 500,000 WPA workers in 13 Southern States, he said, gave him "one of the greatest thrills of my whole life."

"We have never paid anything like the national prevailing wages in this country on WPA," he said. "I hope that the economic royalists and newspapers will be fair enough to publish this. We come within about .65 per cent of the rates of private industry as a whole.

Cites Power of Press.

"And you say, 'Why don't we pay it?' You know as well as I do. There are people in America who control the organs of public opinion who make it impossible to go as far as we would like to go. At one time we got wages up to $30 a month on the average. When we raised that to $55 on the average, I thought they would all die of apoplexy."

Williams said he did not blame the workers for feeling "keenly" about certain wage cuts. He said "we have got a whole body of people who are way below the standard of living that anybody could live on decently. The number of people in these low brackets should be made less."

He advised the workers not to stop fighting for higher wages, and said a change in the Administration might undo all that has been done for the jobless.

Mentioning Federal arts projects in music, painting and writing, he said he had a conviction "that the American people have tasted blood here."

Pullman Fares Ordered Raised 5 Pct. by ICC

road, testified there is no present intention to change the present basic fare of 3 cents a mile in Pullmans, but maintained that the spread between the two fares is too great and has disrupted the normal balance of traffic, with resulting lower revenues than would otherwise have been earned.

He maintained that passenger revenues on the Eastern lines "during the period of very active general business from June 1, 1936, to May 1, 1937 . . . failed to support the contention that the lower fares were superior to the scale previously in effect or were calculated to 'give the greatest possible gross passenger revenue.'" In the West and South, during the same period, but with no change in basic fares, he added, the increase in total passenger revenues had been much larger than in the East.

Even should the present plea be granted, the I. C. C. was told, the coach fares still would be 30.5 per cent below the rates previously in effect "and approved by the commission as reasonable and lawful."

Mr. Franklin insisted that the roads had given the low-fare levels a thorough trial and had done everything in their power "to take advantage, if any advantage could be found, of the reduction in rates to increase the gross passenger revenues."

"The revenue results have certainly been disappointing to the railroads," he added, "and I believe must have been disappointing to the commission."

Frederick W. Walker, vice president of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., appearing on behalf of investors, stressed the need of the roads for greater revenues. He asked that the coach fare increase be granted if the heads of the Eastern lines believed it would bring greater revenue.

The railroads' statement on their proposed wage reduction apparently was produced in preparation for the forthcoming management-labor conference on the proposal. Heads of the rail unions have insisted they will not accept a cut, though accepting the invitation to confer with the management committee in Chicago.

Chief causes of the present situation are given as decreased traffic volume due to both the recession and loss of traffic to competitors "favored in various ways by Federal and State governments," low freight rates and passenger fare, increased costs and taxation, and high wage rates.

Circus, Shut by Strike, Goes Into Hibernation

Scranton, Pa., June 27 (AP).—Sloshing in a heavy rain roustabouts packed the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus aboard its trains tonight for retirement to winter quarters—its 1938 summer tour ended by a strike.

The circus' 1,600 employes went on strike last Wednesday, refusing to take a 25 per cent cut in their pay fixed by a contract a year ago. Saturday night an agreement was signed with the union under which the union agreed to furnish the labor needed to move the circus back to Sarasota, Fla. The packing started Sunday, but was interrupted by rain.

Officer Slays Outlaw as He Cries 'Kill Me!'

2d Kidnaper Captured as Brothers Are Trapped in Cornfield.

By the United Press.

Deselm, Ill., June 27.—Two novice desperadoes from North Dakota, Clarence and Orelle Easton, reached the end of a three week's bandit career today when 40 State policemen and two deputy sheriffs trapped them in a cornfield, killed one of the brothers and probably fatally wounded the other.

Clarence, the 27-year-old elder brother, died pounding his chest and screaming at State policemen to "shoot me—shoot me right in the heart!"

Deputy Sheriff Clinton Craig ordered him to drop his gun and when the bandit continued to yell "shoot me," drilled him through the heart. Another deputy, Jesse Burton, chased the younger brother, 25-year-old Orelle, across the cornfield and dropped him with a shot through the right shoulder.

250 Join Manhunt.

In the hospital, Orelle lapsed into unconsciousness while babbling his story.

More than 250 State troopers and sheriff's deputies took part in the manhunt after the brothers had kidnaped two deputy sheriffs, shot and killed an Indiana State policeman and kidnaped a farmer and his 4-year-old son.

Orelle told police he and Clarence had left Valley City, N. Dak., three weeks ago on a "bank-robbing expedition."

State police of Indiana and Illinois, watching for two bandits who held up a woman at Stevens Point, Wis., first sighted them near Cook, Ind., 2 miles from the Illinois border, when their car stalled yesterday. A State trooper, Ray Dixon, 28, approached to offer help and they shot him through the stomach. Dixon died late today in Holy Family Hospital.

R. J. Hennings, a newspaper photographer with Dixon, jumped from the car and fled. As the two gunmen started to get into the police car, two deputy sheriffs, Charles Hahn, 44, and Joseph Kowalozy, 46, drove up. The gunmen disarmed them, jumped into the car and forced them to drive west.

Deputies Released.

A few miles beyond the State line they released the deputies, and later seized a car belonging to James Novy, a farmer, who was accompanied by his 4-year-old son.

With a cordon of State police drawn around the area, the young bandits attempted to run the gauntlet with their two captives. About a mile east of here, Craig and Burton found them mired beside the road.

Novy, clutching his young son, fled across the road as the shooting started. The bandits ducked into the cornfield, where Clarence was killed and Orelle captured.

Sidney Schulman Sets Recital for Tomorrow

Wampler Witnesses Describe Liquor Orgy on Day of Slaying

man testified, "and told me not to say anything about it."

There were evidences of a drinking orgy, the jury of 12 Charles County farmers and businessmen was told. Beer bottles and glasses were strewn across the yard, other witnesses said.

When he reached the house, Swann related, he found Adams slumped on a bench and Wampler lying at his feet on the grass. With the help of his friend he carried Wampler into the bungalow, then discovered Adams was apparently dead and went to get the sheriff.

Justice Heard Shouts.

Daniel Thew Wright, former justice of the District Supreme Court and a neighbor of the Wamplers, told of hearing shouts and pleadings from Mrs. Wampler about 5 p. m. the day Adams was killed.

"I heard Mrs. Wampler's voice," Justice Wright testified. "It was loud and excited. She kept yelling 'Don't do that, don't do that, stop it!'"

Several hours later, Judge Wright said, he saw Sheriff Russell T. Howard drive into the Wampler yard—about 125 yards from his own property—and he went over to see what had happened.

Adams, said the retired jurist, was lying on his back in front of a bench. His face was swollen and discolored, he added, and there were cuts and bruises about his head.

Blood on Her Face.

"The grass was strewn with beer bottles, broken glass and splotches of blood," Judge Wright declared. "There also was a streak of blood on Mrs. Wampler's face, but she apparently went into the house and wiped it off. It was gone when she returned."

Mrs. Lou H. Wright, attractive wife of the former Washington justice, told also of hearing a commotion at the Wampler home just before dark. She said she walked up the road and heard Mrs. Wampler shout:

"Who do you think you are?—you're not a damn bit of good."

Then she heard Adams' voice, Mrs. Wright testified, but couldn't distinguish what he was saying. A few moments later, she said, Mrs. Wampler again started to shout, this time pleading:

"Stop it, stop it, stop it, I say, stop it!"

Asked by Defense Counsel John Mudd, of La Plata, if she had ever heard similar shouting from the Wampler place before, Mrs. Wright replied:

"Yes. Once last summer I heard Mr. Wampler shout: 'I'm going to split your head wide open.' And then I heard Mrs. Wampler yell for help."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wampler bore evidences of a fight the following day, several witnesses reported. Their faces were scratched and Wampler's nose was badly injured, the jury was told.

Earlier in the day, Alan Buck, 26, author of children's stories, described a day-long drinking party before the killing and told how he and both the Wamplers struck Adams during a drunken brawl.

He said he came out of the house with Mrs. Wampler and found her husband drinking beer with Adams on the front lawn.

"As we walked toward them," Buck related, speaking with slight English accent, "Adams jumped up and started to abuse Mrs. Wampler. He saw he was going to strike her and I tried to ward off the blow with my arm. My fist caught him on the point of the chin. I didn't mean to hurt him, but he fell back onto the bench."

Swears Adams Attacked.

The next thing he knew, the young writer said, Adams was attacking Wampler "for no apparent reason." Wampler also was sitting on the bench, he said, and tried to protect himself and restrain the elderly handyman.

"Mrs. Wampler and I were rather alarmed by this sudden change in events and we rushed in to control Adams. He started smashing out at us with his fists and then we all hit him several times."

Buck said he didn't know how many times Adams was struck, but a short time later he saw the old man with his mouth half open and slumped on the bench apparently unconscious.

"I was alarmed by his appearance, became frightened, turned on my heel and went home," said Buck.

Court was adjourned shortly after 4 p. m. by Chief Judge Walter Mitchell, who with Judges M. C. Loker and Joseph M. Mattingly, is presiding at the trial. The prosecution will continue at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

highest reading—at 3 p. m. An early evening downpour knocked the temperature down again to 62 at 11 p. m.

The series of showers, the heaviest of which occurred during the afternoon rush hour, dropped a total of .63-inch of water on the city.

Thousands of Government workers returning home from their offices were drenched by the downpour.

Victims of the Fourteenth and Upshur streets accident were Rabbi Morris Goldman, 68, of 1405 Harvard street northwest, and his 80-year-old wife. Mrs. Goldman, the most seriously injured, was taken to Emergency Hospital with fractures of the skull and leg. Rabbi Goldman suffered a fractured leg and was taken to Garfield Hospital.

The automobile which struck the aging rabbi and his wife was driven, police said, by Katherine N. Kilgour, of 3909 Morrison street northwest. She was charged with reckless driving and released after furnishing $1,000 bond. Rabbi Goldman is connected with Tifetreth Israel Congregation, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest.

Members of the Bladensburg rescue Squad applied tourniquets to gashes on the leg of E. D. Frear, of Royal Oak, Mich., while other squadsmen worked furiously to release him from his wrecked machine on the Defense Highway. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was found also to have suffered a fractured leg.

Frear's wife and 14-year-old son, Robert, who were passengers in the car, were less seriously injured.

College Expert Asks Extension Of Civil Service Rating to All

Civil

made "without term" by the President, with Senate confirmation, through one of three methods:

A noncompetitive Civil Service examination of the incumbent; a noncompetitive examination of Civil Service employes within the postoffice; an open competitive examination with selection from the three applicants ranking highest.

The Postmaster General may decide which method will be used in any postoffice. The new act limits appointment of acting postmasters to six months unless the Civil Service Commission consents to a longer period.

The executive order referred to by Dr. White of necessity did not bring into the Civil Service provisions those employes who were specifically exempt from Civil Service laws by statute. The President could not intervene where legislation made Civil Service law inoperative. It was to these "left out" employes that Dr. White referred.

Meanwhile, studies are being made to determine the exact applicability of the orders. Samuel H. Ordway, member of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday stated that "there are many questions of legal interpretation which will have to be determined by legal officers of the Government." The commission frankly admits thet at the moment an exact picture of the situation cannot be given.

Observers yesterday saw the likelihood that Congress will be compelled to make additional appropriations to the Civil Service Commission to sustain the greater volume of work the orders will place in its lap. This point was especially emphasized in his communication to The Post. Th ecommission, observers have frequently pointed out, has been operated on a comparatively small appropriation and at times the tremendous volume of activity has been handicapped by lack of personnel and facilities.

Officials yesterday asked emphasis on the fact that veterans' preference under the orders is not jeopardized. Every employment privilege that formerly was accorded them is contained in the orders.

The major question persists, "Am I subject to the provisions of the executive order?" And in many instances this can be answered. But there are dozens of bills carrying appropriations under which Federal employes work which specifically removed these employes forever from civil service provisions. The figures must be compiled after exhaustive breakdown by statisticians before any one will know exactly where all the employes stand.

Harry G. Ritner, editor, of The Washington Federal Bulletin, writes in:

"To approach the subject properly, it is necessary to bear in mind an Attorney General's decision which states in effect that if Congress has seen fit by statute to exclude employes of a particular agency from the provisions of the civil service rules and regulations, the executive may not by executive order place such excluded employes within the classified service by examination.

Roper Informs Display Men of 'Upward Swing'

Says Reports Show Improvement in Inventory Situation.

Members of the International Association of Display Men will swing into the third day of their convention at the Mayflower Hotel today with a new outlook on life.

Yesterday the display men were urged by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper to get ready at once for "the now-forming upward swing." The Secretary declared, "Reports received by the Department of Commerce reflect a greatly improved inventory situation in wholesale and retail lines as a result of a recently inaugurated wave of merchandising effort to stimulate buying consciousness."

This morning, members will convene under the general chairmanship of Carl Hecker, of Chicago.

Scheduled to address the convention are Edward Arkow, Gimbel's, Philadelphia; H. W. Howard, of Macy's, New York; Polly Pettit, New York School of Display; John G. Doran, of St. Louis; Kay Kamen, representative of Walt Disney Enterprises; J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Vernon H. Jones, of Chicago.

Afternoon activities will be given over to sightseeing tours of the city beginning at 1:30 p. m.

Reports that J. R. McCann, display manager of S. Kann & Sons, would run in the organization's presidential election tomorrow were quashed when McCann announced he would support Erwin Hiffman for re-election.

The Chaco Flare-Up.

Bolivia and Paraguay, which have been wrangling over boundaries in the wilderness known as the Chaco for more than 50 years, are reported on the verge of resuming hostilities. For a world already sick of war and war threats that is a gloomy prospect. But it does not necessarily mean that the delegates of the six mediating American republics—the United States among them—have failed in their assignment.

At least the Buenos Aires Peace Conference has succeeded in reviving the commercial life of the two nations, both of which were bled white by the three years of intensive warfare preceding the present truce. Moreover, prisoners have been exchanged, a way has been paved for the resumption of diplomatic relations between the two belligerents and leaders on both sides have been moved to declare publicly that the sword will never solve their problem.

Finally, the conference has prevented actual fighting for nearly three years, no mean accomplishment in these nervous times, especially when one of the principal factors underlying the Chaco dispute has been the vague but highly volatile force politely termed "national honor." Nor, despite the cables' pessimism, is renewed slaughter inevitable. Bolivia and Paraguay agreed in the armistice of 1935—and the agreement was ratified by the legislatures in each country—to submit their differences to the international court at The Hague in event that direct negotiations should fail.

There will be considerable difficulty in inducing the two governments to agree on the points to be submitted to arbitration in The Netherlands; and Paraguay objects to the idea of taking an American problem to Europe. However, she has agreed to the plan and unless she abides by her word will be branded in the eyes of the world as an intransigent deserving of no sympathy. Indeed, both countries will be disgraced if the war is reopened.

The prevailing temper of the Western Hemisphere is unmistakably peaceful, the more so because the rest of the earth seems drifting so willfully toward war. During the past few years the machinery for promoting and maintaining inter-American harmony has been vastly expanded. For Bolivia and Paraguay now to spoil this promising picture would bring down on them the wrath of the New World, if not more positive restraints.

WPA Differentials.

In devising a new wage scale for its workers in 13 Southern States the WPA was doubtless influenced by the debate on the wage-hour bill. The sharp differentials maintained by that agency became a powerful argument against the establishment of a uniform minimum wage throughout the country. At the same time, the long discussion of minimum wages in Congress probably helped to convince the WPA that it is not sound policy to perpetuate differentials greater than can be justified by varying costs of living.

The new schedules for the Southern States will merely narrow the gap between WPA wages paid in the North and in the South. Substantial differentials are still maintained. The wages of unskilled workers, for example, will vary from $26 to $40 per month in the South according to the density of population. In the North the WPA wage for the same category of workers will vary from $40 to $60 per month. An unskilled worker in a large northern city will receive about two and one-third times as much as a similar worker in a small southern town. Certainly that is a notable difference.

Cost of living, says the WPA, is only one of the factors considered in fixing wage scales. Other factors are occupation, the general type of workers to be employed, the standards prevailing in the particular area and the kind of work to be done. After dividing workers into professional, skilled, intermediate and unskilled groups, the WPA appears to have made a conscientious effort to work out fair wage scales for each. It has carefully considered differences in climate, in the density of population and in local customs. But it has failed to make allowance for the great variation in the actual needs of the persons it employs.

Some WPA workers are single; others are married and have large families of children to support. Preference is usually given to men with families, but wages are not varied in relation to the number of persons that must be fed, housed and clothed. Under WPA such variations are considered impractical, for it is dealing with "wages" rather than relief benefits.

The greatest disparity existing in WPA, therefore, is not in wage differentials as between the North and South but in the equal treatment of families whose needs are totally different. This discrimination against large families can never be ironed out so long as the Administration maintains the fiction that it is creating real jobs for the unemployed through the WPA.

A Moral For War-Makers.

Over the past week-end, it is reported, special precautions were taken in Italy to guard against surprise air raids by Spanish republican fliers. For however much the Barcelona government's alleged threat to take reprisals against Italy for the bombing of open Spanish towns might be discounted, it could not entirely be dismissed.

After all, the Italian press had been openly boasting of the exploits of Italian fliers and bombing planes in the service of Gen. Franco. For months Barcelona, Valencia and other Spanish government centers have been subjected to repeated air raids, with the toll of dead and wounded running into thousands and anger against Franco's Fascist allies steadily mounting in Republican Spain.

It would be strange indeed, under the circumstances, if some leaders of the Barcelona regime had not toyed with the ghastly idea of giving Italian cities a taste of the bitter medicine which Spanish cities have been forced to swallow in such large and tragic draughts. But even if humanitarian considerations are left aside, it is clear that such eye-for-an-eye tactics by the republicans would serve no military purposes. On the contrary, the results would in all certainty be suicide. For the consequence of such an attack on Italian cities would be, as the Rome government warned, a wholesale Italian attack on Republican Spain, with an even greater toll of death and destruction than has accompanied nationalist air raids hitherto.

However, the Barcelona government, through its Paris embassy, denies it ever had the intention of bombing Italian cities. The threat of reprisals, it is explained, involved only the possibility of an attack on Majorca, believed to be the base from which nationalist airplanes, presumably of Italian origin, have been carrying on their raids of Spanish government ports. At any rate, no raids on Italian cities took place. So another war scare evaporated as so many previous ones have done.

But the episode is not without an important moral. For the first time the Fascist powers have been forced to envisage the possibility that they may some day be the victim of the kind of tactics which they have so light-heartedly employed. Neither Germany nor Italy nor any other country can today feel itself completely secure against destruction from the air, no matter what safeguarding measures it may take. Indeed, the Fascist powers and Japan, which have been in the forefront in employing the airplane as an instrument of war against armies and helpless civilian populations, are highly vulnerable to air attack.

In countenancing such tactics as the bombardment of Spanish cities, and air raids on Chinese centers, such powers have sown to the wind the real possibility that at some time or other they may reap the whirlwind.

Turkey, France And Sanjak.

A year ago the League of Nations scored one of its few recent victories by helping to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Franco-Turkish dispute over the Sanjak of Alexandretta.

This area, which includes the magnificent port of Alexandretta and the ancient city of Antioch, has since the end of the World War been part of the French Syrian mandate. But its population is, to a large if uncertain extent, Turkish. Indeed, the Sanjak is one of the few regions outside of Turkey which harbors any considerable Turkish element.

Not surprisingly, therefore, the signing of a treaty between France and Syria in 1936, whereby the French mandate was to be scrapped and Syria and Lebanon permitted to become independent states, greatly interested the Ankara government. Alarm was expressed by Turkey over the possibility that, under Syrian rule, the Turkish inhabitants of the Sanjak might become the victims of persecution. For that reason the Turkish government demanded that France grant the Sanjak a special status. It was suspected, however, that Kamal Ataturk, the Turkish dictator, hoped to annex Alexandretta to Turkey, a suspicion which an apparent concentration of Turkish troops along the Syrian border did nothing to destroy.

However, there was no Turkish coup d'etat with respect to Alexandretta. On the contrary, the Sanjak problem was turned over to the League Council with Turkey's consent. The principal provision of the settlement effected was that Alexandretta, while nominally to continue as a part of Syria, would be given a technically autonomous status under the auspices of the League and the special protection of Turkey, France and Syria. Apparently all that remained to be done was to hold an election in the Sanjak for a legislative council to serve as the area's governing body. And in pursuance of that objective a League commission was appointed to superintend the registration of voters.

Since then Turkey has found much fault with the arrangement, in part because there is a possibility that in such an election the Turks may find themselves in a decided minority with Armenians, Kurds, Circassians and Arab voters, now combined in an anti-Turkish bloc, holding the whiphand. Turkey, therefore, is now pressing to have the Sanjak problem taken out of League hands and made the subject of direct negotiations between Ankara and Paris.

As it happens, the international situation is decidedly favorable to the Turkish position. Because of the Italian threat in the eastern Mediterranean, Great Britain and France are anxious to retain Turkish good will and are thus in a mood to make concessions to Kamal Ataturk. In the long run they may prefer to see Alexandretta under direct or indirect Turkish control, provided Turkey remains their friend or ally, than have it dominated by a weak Syrian state potentially at the mercy of an aggressive power. In other words, a great deal more is at stake in the Sanjak problem than the political fate of its 190,000 inhabitants. It has become a highly important pawn in international politics.

Propaganda And The Schools.

American educators appear to be more concerned over protection of the schools from propaganda than at any time in recent years. At least that is the impression arising from the convention of the National Education Association in New York. The sessions opened with pleas for the preservation of democracy and the ideal of unprejudiced education. And a report from the N. E. A.'s policy-forming body, the Educational Policies Committee, calls for decentralization of education as a means of protecting the schools from propaganda.

There is, of course, nothing new in the principle thus emphasized. It has become especially important because of the widespread use of propaganda to tear down democratic institutions. "In the totalitarian states," the report points out, "state education is the instrument used to regiment the thinking of the people." Schools become not institutions of learning but a means of training the people for their respective duties under a dictatorial regime.

Without exaggerating the possibilities of a dictatorship in the United States, the committee rightly fears the possible results of a Federal education system. "Through the determination of curriculums and the presentation of class or partisan political propaganda," it points out, a group in power here might use a Federal school system to its own advantage. The recent attitude of Congress toward politics in the WPA is sufficient warning against any trend toward nationalization of the schools.

The strange aspect of the report is that this sound advice should be coupled with a suggestion of more Federal aid for States with backward school systems. In another discussion Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, frankly admitted that some degree of Federal control is inevitable if the Government extends financial assistance to the schools. Indeed, Congress could not be expected to vote any large sum for educational purposes without laying down conditions as to how it should be spent.

And if the principle of Federal interference with local schools should once be established, no one can say how far it would extend. Educators should not proceed on the theory that it can go just so far and then turn back. If the States relinquish any substantial part of their responsibility for the schools, it will be extremely difficult for them to regain full control.

After 300 Years.

The celebration at Wilmington, yesterday helps to center attention on the happy fact that many countries and many strains have contributed valuable ingredients to the American amalgam.

The occasion for the festivities was the 300th anniversary of the first permanent white settlement in the Delaware River Valley by Swedes and Finns. The colony these hardy pioneers founded remained under Swedish sovereignty only 17 years before it was taken by the Dutch, who, in turn, were forced to relinquish it to the English. But the up-standing, industrious and peace-loving settlers from the Swedish kingdom stayed on and played their part in the development of this Nation. And, fortunately, the Kalmar Nyckel was only the first of many ships that were later to bring to these shores men and women from Europe's northland.

The Wilmington celebration also calls attention to the unbroken friendship, the real community of spirit, which binds the United States to Sweden and Finland. In those lands the democratic spirit continues to prevail and so does the spirit of peace, of good neighborliness, of international self-restraint. These characteristics which the settlers of New Sweden showed in so admirable a degree, their descendants here and in the homelands continue to manifest. As Secretary Hull has said:

> They and the nations from which they had sprung have made an important contribution, in our country and in the world generally, toward that firm, unobtrusive, and essential foundation of solid worth, hard labor, social idealism, and deep piety, without which no civilization can endure.

Still, we must give Hollywood credit for some ingenuity. No matter how many times a plot is used, the picture is given a different title each time.

"Eventually the relations of the nations of the world will be like those of the members of a large family," predicts an editor. They pay debts to each other like that now

The Roerich Museum.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a graduate of the Master Institute of United Arts, school of the Roerich Museum of New York, may I call attention to the fact that recently, when this institution was closed to visitors, all of the magnificent paintings by Nicholas Roerich were removed from its walls. We, Associated Alumni of the Master Institute, wish to express our profound disapproval of such actions and such changes of policy as have been announced with them.

May I point out that a public proclamation, giving the Roerich Museum to the United States, was signed on July 24, 1929, by all of its trustees and published in the official publications of the Roerich Museum. This proclamation has been frequently reaffirmed in the press and in public utterances by Louis L. Horch, the president of the Roerich Museum, and a trustee. Nevertheless the museum has been closed and Prof. Roerich's paintings removed. These acts clearly betray the commitments in behalf of the cultural welfare of the nation.

We of the alumni shall always remain indebted to the Roerich Museum for the opportunities which it formerly afforded us in the pursuit of our cultural studies. Since it is our conviction that such opportunities have never been equaled in America, we are grieved beyond measure to see this great institution thus abolished.

AURIEL BESSEMER,
Chaiman of the Associated Alumni of Master Institute of United Arts, Roerich Museum.

Extending Civil Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without a doubt it is most essential for the proper administration of any government that its employes be appointed, dropped and promoted through individual fitness rather than because of political connections. Such a method of selecting her civil servants has made Great Britain's service, like her navy, second to none.

A step nearer the same goal was accomplished by President Roosevelt's Executive order extending the classified civil service whereby approximately 130,000 Federal employes will be placed under the merit system beginning next February. Thus they can also enjoy security of tenure and retirement benefits after passing a non-competitive examination.

Analysis of the order brings out many new and worthy objects, for example, the provisions of Sections 7 and 8. As they become effective Federal employment will no longer be looked down upon as the refuge of the incompetent or unambitious men and women, for at last a real career system is to be established leading to executive positions with correspondingly good remuneration.

The Post has consistently urged what the order is expected to accomplish, and your editorial of June 26 very rightly expresses the hope that the new Congress will extend civil service requirements to the Federal agences which are still entirely or partially, like the FHA and USHA, exempted therefrom by law.

Today's Caesars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't the Italians, Germans and Russians see that their dictators are trying to do the very same thing that Caesar attempted? Can't they see that evidently the only way to defy them is by the same method by which Caesar was defied?

If it is true that actions speak louder than words, the people of these nations are such cowards that they are afraid to oppose their rulers. If something isn't done soon, these countries will try to monopolize the whole of Europe and there will be another World War. JOSEPH T. CADWELL.

Railroads And Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How sound is my life insurance in view of the present situation in railroad securities? This is a question being asked quite honestly by many policyholders. It is being asked, one fears, not so honestly and a lot more persistently by some whose interest in the Government's attitude toward helping the railroads is a lot more direct than the mere ownership of a life insurance policy.

Particularly cheering to the policyholder must be the results of a survey soon to be released by Alfred M. Best & Co., outstanding authorities on life insurance practices.

"The real facts (as to insurance company holdings of rail bonds)," Best will say, "are almost startlingly favorable to the insurance companies."

Taking the 1937 statements of the 33 largest companies holding 97 per cent of the life insurance assets of the country, 11 per cent are represented by railroad bonds. The difference between the actual market price on these securities and the amortized values at which the companies are permitted to carry them on their books was $123,000,000. But these same companies had surpluses (that is contingency reserves above the legal reserves—or present cash values of all their outstanding policies) of $1,670,000,000. and if the entire bond holdings including rails, Governments, utilities and municipals, had been sold at the market these companies would have had a net profit of $109,000,000 above the figures at which they were valued by the companies.

Those of us who understand a little about the system of fluctuating mortality and special contingent security reserves, coupled with the practice of prompt dividend adjustments and writing down of doubtful assets used by our ultra conservative life companies, are in no anxiety. Our home offices have long been keenly alert to the railroad situation but are in no sense alarmed.

For about 100 years through four wars, innumerable epidemics, frequent booms and subsequent panics, American life insurance has stood the stresses which have wrecked so many other institutions. In 1938 it is still carrying on in its own high tradition. DWIGHT T. SCOTT,
President, D. C. Chapter Chartered Life Underwriters.
Washington, June 24.

Dogs And Masters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this fuss about Chevy Chase dogs? A dog can be a nice pet if properly trained for city life. I like dogs, in fact have had several myself, but I can't like a dog that barks and snaps at me, burns up my shrubbery, makes paths across my lawn and keeps me awake nights.

But a dog is a dog and you can't kill him for that. If left untrained they will do just those things. It's the master of that kind of a dog who is at fault; but you can't kill them either (although I have felt like it some nights). If a dog barks and snaps at me it is as if it was his master who had assaulted me and I will use any means at my disposal not only to protect myself but also to retaliate at either or both of them. H. W. W.
Washington, June 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Non-Dog Lover" resorts to the adjectives, "undignified and slinking," in an attempt to belittle the dog. I do not know of any act more slinking and undignified than to attack by means of an anonymous letter, even when attacking a dog. The fact that "Non-Dog Lover" was afraid to indicate his or her identity is sufficient for all dog owners.

ROBERT W. DICK.
Washington, June 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have nothing against dogs or any other animals. In fact, if I was able to do so, I would have a private zoo. But as it is I have to content myself with a few goldfish and a canary. That is about the only kind of animal pets that anyone living in a crowded city should have a right to have. I used to have cats because they are more quiet than dogs, but cats can be a nuisance, too, both to the owner and the neighbors, so I got rid of them. J. L.
Washington, June 25.

Reactions To The President's Chat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be difficult to conceive of anything more inconsistent than President Roosevelt, in his fireside chat, criticizing an auto executive for "using the stockholders' money to pay the postage for his personal opinions" when our Chief Executive has utilized billions of the taxpayers' money to promote his own views. Why strain at an infinitesmal gnat when swallowing colossal, indigestible camels of almost every description has been one of the favorite pursuits of the Administration?

It is most certainly Mr. Roosevelt's right to air his views and it is likewise the privilege of an automobile executive, or anyone, to express his opinions. And there is probably no record of any stockholders objecting to the aforesaid magnate using the company's postage stamps to get his views across. On the other hand there are millions of intelligent people who are of the opinion that Mr. Roosevelt's theory that a nation can spend its way out of trouble is fundamentally unsound. Hence, they rightly resent constant and continued waste of public funds. E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.
Washington, June 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's air-conditioned chat adds to the proof that he is a man of variegated talents and attainments. He is master at once of the science of statistics and the art of invective. With even-handed justice, or injustice, he can heap bouquets upon himself or billingsgate upon his opponents. His daring and devastating attack upon the "copperheads" was worthy of Don Quixote and his assault upon the windmills of Andalusia.

The President asserted that in 1932 "the total national income of all the people in the country had reached the low point of $38,000,000,000," and that in 1937 "it had risen to $70,000,000,000." The President states the income for both years in terms of dollars taking no account of the fact that in 1932 the word dollar described a legal unit of value which contained 25 and a fraction grains of standard gold and that in 1937, owing to the money magic of the New Deal, the word dollar described a legal unit of value which contained only 15 and a fraction grains of standard gold.

It is true that the national income in 1932 was the trifling sum of only $38,000,000,000, but that amount is expressed in terms of old-time dollars, dollars which represented 25 grains of standard gold—the now discarded dollar of a discredited regime. But that amount, paltry as it was, expressed in terms of dinky New Deal dollars mounts up to more than 60,000,000,000 such dollars.

Now take the national income for 1937 which the President estimates at $70,000,000,000. These are New Deal dollars, this is magic money, these are midget dollars, each one of which represents barely more than 15 grains of standard gold. Convert the $70,000,000,000 of 1937 into the old-time dollars of 1932 and that majestic sum shrinks and shrivels down to $42,000,000,000.

The President has a perfect right to use the word dollar and to choose either the old-time dollar of 25 grains of gold or the New Deal dollar with its 15 grains, or he should, in fairness, adopt one or the other standard and apply the same standard to the income of both years—unless some mystic change in the moral climate justifies such a diversity of standards.

The Post Impressionist

Bow-Wow!

THERE has been such a deal of serious and excited argument lately on the editorial page of The Post on the subject of dogs that I'm not quite sure I know where I stand on the canine problem. I am not by nature a dog fancier, nor, on the other hand, do I go around tying tin cans onto their tails. True, dogs used to bother me a lot. When I would be kept awake half the night by their unlicensed broadcasting, or perhaps jerked out of a sound sleep by the rude clatter of a garbage-can in the process of being pilfered, I was, I am almost ashamed to say, mildly irked. But I overcame it. I asked myself: "Is that any way to act? After all, isn't the dog man's best friend?"

That got me. And now I can take 'em or leave 'em alone. I am as impervious to dogs as they are to me. Consequently I can view the dog question impartially, but none too seriously.

Last month I visited my father up-State New York, and the night before I arrived a young hound got into his chicken-yard and slew 38 of his two-pound fryers. But even such a wholesale onslaught was met dispassionately and with equanimity. We did not organize a posse of indignant townspeople to track down the killer, which really in no way could be blamed for this sportive coup de main which was undoubtedly but some primal urge for gallinaceous prey. All we did was to collect a fair amount from the State dog fund. But you can see into what a dilemma my feelings were put: I was glad the dog escaped unpunished, but at the same time I began to wonder why so many people had to keep dogs.

I concluded that it is partly because people like to think that a dumb brute will love them if nobody else will, and I wondered if it is not often as Bill Nye once said of a certain Secretary Spates who had expressed a wish for a dog of his own: "He had a light yellow cane, and wanted a dog to match. He said that he wanted something to love. If he could wake up in the stillness of the night and hear his faithful dog fighting fleas, and licking his chops, and coughing, he (the secretary) would feel as though he was beloved, at least, by one."

I quote from Nye because he was a great authority on canine lore. It was he who discovered that "malignant insomnia is fast becoming the great foe of the modern American dog," and it was he who first set us really to pondering the dog question. "Did it," he asks, "ever occur to the average thinking mind that we might squeeze along for weeks without a dog? Whole families have existed for years after being deprived of dogs . . . I saw a man last week in St. Paul who was once poor, and so owned several variegated dogs. He was confirmed in that habit. But he summoned all his will power at last and said he would shake off these dogs and become a man. He did so, and today he owns a city lot in St. Paul, and seems to be the picture of health."

To me, one of the most remarkable attributes of dogs is their uncanny knack for inspiring great literature. Right off the bat you will name "The Call of the Wild," by Jack London, or "Flush," by Virginia Woolf, or "The Portrait of a Dog," by Mazo de la Roche, or "Beautiful Joe," by Marshall Saunders, or "Bob, Son of Battle," by Alfred Ollivant. But of all dog poems I think the best is Goldsmith's "Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog," the ironic tale of the good man from Islington who was bitten by a dog:

The wound it seemed both sore and sad
To every Christian eye;
And while they swore the dog was mad,
They swore the man would die.
But soon a wonder came to light,
That showed the rogues they lied;
The man recovered of the bite,
The dog it was that died.

And another favorite of mine is one of Guy Wetmore Carryl's fables, called "The Pampered Lapdog and the Misguided Ass." It is the sad story of the ass that watched with mournful eye "a woolly little terrier pup" being "petted and cologned" by its indulgent mistress.

"If thus," he mused, "the feminine
And fascinating gender
Is led to love, I, too, can win
Her protestations tender."
And then the poor, misguided chap
Sat down upon the lady's lap.

I really think a good many of us ought to bone up on the dog question from a few angles other than our own. Some of us can't look at a dog without baptizing the beast with baby-talk, and some greet them with epithets that ought to be saved for human beings, who can talk back. There will always be persons pro-dog and anti-dog. They remind me of the children who were reprimanded by their mother for what sounded like an ominous verbal combat and who retorted: "We're not quarreling—we're just tis-not-tis-ing." I believe it would relieve the canine congestion considerably if more people could, like myself, enjoy dogs vicariously, and you can see that I enjoy them a great deal.

Portrait Of A Broker Giving Advice.

"You understand, of course, that nothing about the stock market is certain. Anybody can be wrong. But everything the Administration does is against recovery, the pump-priming will only lead to harder times, and it might not be a bad idea to remain on the side lines until . . .

(Several stocks have jumped 5 to 7 points by this time.)

"Naturally a man has to be his own judge of what is the right time to take on stocks. We are not infallible. Ahem. It was quite plain for the past several months that stocks were absurdly low and that, if picked up at such levels, they would make a man money in the long run. Still, caution is not always a bad policy, and . . .

(It is now seen that the market is boiling in the greatest activity in weeks.)

* * * *

"Let's see, what was I saying? . . . Oh, yes, the fellow who makes money in the market has to have courage. He has got to take on a line of stocks when stocks are down and when nobody seems to want them. There were always great values behind the leading securities. It is a mistake to get bearish on American business . . .

(A number of stocks are now up 10 points or more.)

* * * *

"I hate to warn you again that this is no time to hesitate. Never sell America short! Stocks should have been acquired when they were in the doldrums. You had better act quickly if you want to make money. As I said before, we are IN A BULL MARKET!"

(The customer, now gone quite mad, tears off nine yards of ticker tape and leaps down an elevator shaft, twirling the tape playfully after him and shouting, "It's all done by mirrors.")

No Trenches Needed

By Carl A. Ackerman.

Solidarity Of The Americas.

THERE IS a story current in Europe which bears a relationship to our individual opportunities and to our collective security.

Prior to the recent visit in Rome by the head of the German state, workmen were observed repairing one of the main streets. Evidently there had been considerable digging and people were standing by, watching the progress of the work.

"Looking for the Rome-Berlin axis?" asked a bystander.

"No," retorted a laborer, "Digging a trench."

Throughout the greater part of Europe that is the chief interest of the people. Because of the Rome-Berlin axis, or the London-Paris and Paris-Moscow axes, peoples are engaged in preparing for another world war. In Asia they are similarly occupied because of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis or other axes, around which the destinies of nations are spinning like tops made of dynamite. No one can forecast when they may explode.

Contrast these conditions with the situation in the Western Hemisphere and all of us are immediately aware that there is also an American axis. But it is a peace axis and extends from Canada to the Argentine. I think it is in order for us to recognize this axis and to explore our relation to its future.

* * * *

WE NEED a new national perspective of the Western Hemisphere as a whole. We have been thinking almost exclusively in terms of an east and west axis. To the isolationist this has extended only from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans. To the internationalist all of Europe and Asia have been included. Many of us still think that the Mason and Dixon line divides the North and South. We are unaccustomed to the thought that North and South may properly include Canada and South America.

It is time for all of us to discard these old conceptions. Discard the old ideas of imperialism, the current foreign ideas of nationalism and the horizontal theories of internationalism. We must free ourselves from every form of "ism" and think in terms of an American hemisphere, where every nation is independent and equal.

To establish an enduring period of prosperity and to insure our future peace, we should regard ourselves as Americans not alone because of our citizenship in the United States but because we live in a hemisphere, supported by an axis of common interests and common ideas. To the north and to the south of us are friendly peoples. We do not need to dig trenches anywhere in this hemisphere.

* * * *

LAST SUMMER I traveled to the Panama Canal, down the west coast of South America, across the Andes Mountains and back to New York via the east coast, visiting seven American Republics. Everywhere I was impressed by the virility and the self-confidence of the people.

Although they spoke a different language and shared another culture and heritage, they are as American as we are, in their outlook upon life.

We need a new national perspective of South America, not to defend Latin America from attacks by European propaganda, but in order that we may be equal participants in the advancement of this new world, which is, in effect a new America. Some day we shall have a new pride in being known as Americans, not because we are citizens of the United States but because we are inhabitants of the Western Hemisphere.

As Americans we shall not isolate ourselves from Europe or Asia but we shall experience a new security in the spiritual unity of a hemisphere of nations, with no desire to conquer or subjugate any people.

Litvinoff Speaks Out

Foreign Affairs Commissar Blames 'Reactionaries' For Present Plight Of Europe; Promises Russia Will Stand Firm.

Following is the report distributed by Tass, the Official Russian news agency, of an address delivered June 23 at Leningrad by Maxim M. Litvinoff, people's commissar of foreign affairs of the U. S. S. R.

IN A GENERAL appraisal of the present international situation, Maxim Litvinoff, people's commissar of foreign affairs, pointed out that at the present time one observes a liquidation of the state of things created after the World War.

Without a single shot," he said, "without any agreement with the authors of the Versailles and other treaties, Germany has already succeeded in annulling practically all the results for the sake of which the western European powers waged the World War. . . . Taking possession of Austria and menacing Czechoslovakia, Germany strives for the creation of a German Mittel Europa. This the nightmare of Germany's military and industrial hegemony has again arisen before her rivals in the World War, inspiring them with an awe and fear which they never felt before that war. The substance of the whole diplomacy of the Western powers for the last five years has been avoiding any resistance to Germany's offensive, the fulfillment of her demands and even whims, and the fear of arousing her discontent and disapproval even in the slightest degree."

Non-Resistance Seen To Encourage Aggression.

LITVINOFF pointed out that the tactics of non-resistance naturally encourage Germany to further offensives, and emphasized that, in the more or less near future, Germany intends to proceed to the restoration of her prewar frontiers and simultaneously to the presentation of formal demands for the return of her colonies.

Stating that this concerns also "the capturing from the former Allies of very strong and vital positions which belonged to them prior to the World War," Litvinoff continued: "It is sufficient to recall the present occupation of a considerable part of Spain and her islands as well as Spanish Morocco by Germany in conjunction with Italy. Until now French strategical plans have been based on the friendly attitude or at least on the neutrality of Spain and therefore France has not concerned herself at all with the defense of the Franco-Spanish border. Spain in the hands of, or under the influence of hostile elements means that France will find it necessary to reckon with a new front."

Dealing further with the problem of Mediterranean communications, Litvinoff concluded that thus the strategical position of England and France has been considerably weakened as compared with the prewar period, while Germany's position has been strengthened correspondingly."

Japan's efforts to attain hegemony in Asia was then described by Litvinoff. Isolated in 1922, Japan was forced to sign the Washington Treaty and observed this undertaking for ten years. Subsequently she tried to test the strength of those factors which forced upon her the obligation not to encroach upon the integrity of China. Meeting no material resistance from the signatories of the Washington Treaty, Japan unfolded her aggression and as a result there is to be seen the liquidation of the Washington Treaty, "one of the achievements of the Western powers which accompanied the conclusion of the World War."

Soviet Union Exempt From Charges Of Defeat.

"THE PAST six years," he continued, "have represented the period of gradual and systematic liquidation of the international order created as a result of the World War and consequently the period of continual defeats for the diplomacy of those countries which initiated the postwar treaties. At the same time when one reads the reactionary foreign press one may gather the impression that the successes of the aggressive countries imply the failure or defeat chiefly of the Soviet Union. They forget that the Soviet Union had nothing to do with the creation of the postwar treaties. They forget that Hitler's imperialist policy is a continuation and materialization of the German policy of the Kaiser's epoch—and that the beginning of Japan's present aggressive policy in China also dates back to the period preceding the birth of the Soviet state. It does not follow therefrom that the Soviet Union regards developments with indifference. Germany bases her foreign policy on unrestrained aggressoin, openly conducts her anti-Soviet policy and publicly indulges in dreams of the Ukraine and even of the Urals.

"We do not wish that Soviet territory should become an object even of dreams of this kind for anybody.

"When states are active in the world arena which entertain unbounded aggressive ambitions, openly proclaim their aspiration to dominate whole continents, enslave and even annihilate whole nations and races, not a single state, however strong and remote it may be, can be guaranteed that waves of such frenzied aggression may not reach its own frontiers even though in the distant future. In any case the U. S. S. R. is opposed to changing by means of a new war the state of things established after the World War.

"Cognizance of the fact that the collective efforts of all peaceful countries are needed to preserve peace and forestall wars led the U. S. S. R. to Geneva where the League of Nations invited the Soviet Union for this purpose. Striving to contribute in every way to the preservation of peace by means of collective international collaboration, and knowing that without the Soviet Union it is impossible to create a European and world balance which would check aggression, the Soviet government consented to conclude pacts of mutual assistance with France and Czechoslovakia.

"Our general policy of peace naturally makes us desire that disputes arising between Czechoslovakia and her neighbors should be solved peacefully but we strictly abstain from any unsolicited advice to the Czechoslovak government because we trust its peaceableness and believe that it is its own judge in questions relating to the inner structure of its state, that it will itself find reasonable limits of concessions compatible with the prestige, sovereignty and independence of a state."

Non-Intervention Aim Described By Commissar.

LITVINOFF pointed out that while joining in the agreement on non-intervention in Spanish affairs, the U. S. S. R. entered the London committee on the assumption that the latter could ensure absolute non-intervention. At present the role of the U. S. S. R. in the committee consists in not allowing the intervention of the committee itself in Spanish affairs on Franco's side.

Litvinoff further pointed out that the western European states now menaced by aggression have proved unable to create a firmly welded grouping in Europe itself without which one cannot expect the eventual co-operation of the great transatlantic republic. On the other hand the small and middle-size European states have either openly joined the orbit of the aggressive countries or proclaimed their neutrality while for a small and weak country to speak now of neutrality means to declare that it refuses the assistance of the League of Nations, of friends and allies and invites all those who wish to rape it. But if the aggressive countries have already been able to force such a declaration of neutrality, the very next day after mobilization they will compel these countries to break their neutrality and will call them into service. The passive attitude of the western European states in the face of aggression is caused by the fact that reactionary circles in those countries "prefer to sacrifice their national interests, endanger or even lose their national positions for the sake of preserving their social and class positions."

There also exist of course other bourgeois circles desiring above all to defend their national interests, their national independence, their national and universal human culture, Litvinoff pointed out. These circles regard fascism as something ephemeral. Meanwhile in their foreign policy the aggressive countries resort chiefly to threats of blackmail and bluff. However, the experience with Ethiopia, Spain and China should inspire the aggressor with a realization of the necessity for greater circumspection and caution in the future.

Litvinoff said that the aggressors will always seek new booty in the possessions of those who have proved their inability to defend their positions. In view of their internal weakness the present-day aggressors try to act in short order and need weakly defended territories.

"The aggressors will not find these conveniences in the Soviet Union," Litvinoff said. "Conducting a policy of peace devoid of any provocations, the peoples of the Soviet Union remind hostile states that every foot of Soviet land is strongly defended. This will keep enemies far from Soviet frontiers."

Chaco Problem

By Barnet Nover

Troubles Of The Peacemakers.

IN CONTRAST with the situation obtaining in Europe and Asia at the present time, the American hemisphere presents a picture of profound and unbroken calm. Peace reigns all the way from Tierra del Fuego to the Arctic, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. And whereas the Old World machinery of peace lies rusted and unused and perhaps useless, that in the New World appears to be functioning with increasing vigor and efficiency.

During the past few years a number of disputes between American nations which, in the past might have and sometimes did lead to the point of war, have been settled in amicable fashion.

There was the Colombian-Peruvian dispute over Leticia; there was the Dominican-Haitian flare-up over the massacre of Haitians living in Dominican territory; there was the Peruvian-Ecuadorian boundary dispute and the Mexican-American difficulties regarding the expropriation of American oil property.

None of these has led to war. And with regard to all of them it can honestly be said that whatever other reasons there may have been for the readiness to avoid hostilities, one factor contributing to that end has been the pressure of neighboring nations anxious to prevent wars from arising in the Americas.

* * * *

IN ONE AMERICAN area, however, peace exists only in the form of a truce and despite strong pressure from the outside no final settlement of a dangerous quarrel has been achieved. That region is the Chaco, scene of a prolonged and suicidal war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

That war lasted from June, 1932, until June, 1935, and drained both nations of their manpower and their wealth. But the armistice solved none of the basic issues which produced the struggle and has not even been followed by the establishment of normal diplomatic relations between the erstwhile contenders. The peace established in the Chaco has been primarily a peace of exhaustion, with the possibility always latent that once one or both of the nations had recovered from the bloodletting a new resort to arms would be attempted.

* * * *

IN OTHER WORDS, the Chaco situation continues to be laden with dynamite.

To be sure, Pan American statesmen have not ignored this situation. Far from it. For years the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute has been the object of intense mediatory efforts both at Geneva and Buenos Aires. The League tried to cope with the problem but only succeeded in antagonizing Paraguay to the point where that nation resigned its membership. But the Pan American mediation efforts have so far not proved any more successful.

In the truce agreement of June, 1935, the La Paz and Asuncion governments agreed to the summoning of a peace conference under the auspices of the President of the Argentine republic. It was also agreed that in the event the peace commission failed to achieve a settlement satisfactory to the erstwhile combatants, the whole matter should be turned over to the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague.

* * * *

FOR THREE YEARS the Chaco peace conferees, consisting of representatives of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, the United States and Uruguay as well as of Bolivia and Paraguay, have been trying to bring about a settlement. Recently they suggested a partition of the disputed area on a basis which President Roosevelt in a message to the La Paz and Asuncion governments declared to be impartial and equitable and to offer "every possibility for lasting peace, security and the national interests" of both countries. Far from solving the Chaco problem for once and for all, such mediatory efforts have now threatened only to bring that cauldron to a new boil. Once again there is talk of resuming the war.

The trouble seems to be that the armistice of 1935 left Paraguay in possession of a large part of the Chaco. The leaders at Asuncion see no reason why their claim to victory and the rewards of victory should not be recognized. But Bolivia, for her part, is equally adamant in opposing a settlement of that kind, particularly a settlement which does not give her territory on the Paraguay River and thus an indirect outlet to the sea.

* * * *

HERE THE MATTER rests for the time being. It is likely that the threat of a new war arising over the Chaco is exaggerated. It is not clear whether either Bolivia or Paraguay or both are in a position to wage war again. But it is clear that the Chaco problem provides the newly established inter-American peace machinery with its most severe test.

Should it meet that test the long delay in successfully bringing about a restoration of Bolivian-Paraguayan amity will be forgotten. But if Bolivia and Paraguay once again plunge into war such an eventuality would make a mockery of the work done by three years of unremitting labors at Buenos Aires, cast a dark shadow over South America and set back Pan Americanism for many years. For, as pointed out by Ronald Stuart Kain in the current issue of Foreign Affairs, the neighbors of Bolivia and Paraguay, in particular Brazil and Argentina, are interested in the economic development of those two nations and are tending to take sides. Another Chaco war, therefore, might tend to spread beyond the bounds of that miasmic but economically valuable region.

Thus the effort to bring about a settlement of the Chaco problem involves more than the desire to restore real peace between Bolivia and Paraguay. The peace of South America, generally, is bound up in it.

Maybe the psychologists and educators are right. Perhaps parents of left-handed progeny are guilty of a grevious fault when they attempt to make over their left-handed offspring and teach them to eat the nice spinach with the spoon in the right mitt instead of the left.

Many persons still believe that all left-handers must be a bit eccentric. In fact, the word "sinister," which originally meant nothing more than "left," has come through the ages, to acquire a wholly different connotation. Only a decade ago, Ring Lardner, that eminent authority on the raising and training of children, wrote a piece on the upbringing of youngsters with a tendency to list to port.

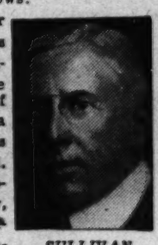
Attitude Of Indiana Republicans Toward Black-listed Van Nuys Holds Important Signal For Anti-New Deal Coalition.

By Mark Sullivan.

THE NEXT STEP having to do with the "purge" of Democratic Senators not satisfactory to President Roosevelt, takes place in Indiana this week. This present step takes place not in the Democratic Party but in the Republican. The facts are as follows:



SULLIVAN.

Frederick Van Nuys is a Democratic Senator from Indiana. He opposed President Roosevelt's court proposal. He was a key man in the opposition. He was on the Senate Judiciary Committee which had charge of the proposal, and was one of seven Democrats on the committee who wrote a majority report unfavorable to the proposal. This unfavorable report was a body-blow to the proposal.

For this, Senator Van Nuys is to be denied renomination. To deny him is comparatively easy, for in Indiana candidates for Senators are nominated by State conventions which usually are controlled by party leaders. The opposition to Mr. Van Nuys comes from the higher party leaders and from Washington. Small local Democratic leaders would like Mr. Van Nuys renominated because they think he would strengthen the ticket. However, prevention of his renomination is practically a thing already done, although the Democratic State Convention does not meet until July 12. So much is prevention of Mr. Van Nuys' renomination taken for granted that Mr. Van Nuys himself accepts it. He has announced that he will run on a third ticket as an "independent Democrat."

Republicans Of State To Assemble Tomorrow.

IN THIS SITUATION the action of the Indiana Republicans becomes important. They, too, nominate their Senatorial candidate in a State convention. The convention takes place tomorrow.

Some Indiana Republicans want the party to take action which would help return Mr. Van Nuys to the Senate. It is not proposed that the Republicans should themselves formally nominate Mr. Van Nuys. Senator Van Nuys says he prefers not to have a Republican nomination. Apparently he wishes carefully to preserve his status as a Democrat so as to have no flaw in his appeal to Democratic voters when he runs as an "independent Democrat."

One suggestion is that the Republicans should refrain from making any nomination for Senator and should pass a resolution commending Senator Van Nuys' patriotism. Another is that the Republicans should nominate a candidate, but that the candidate should later withdraw. One suggestion is that the Republicans, when they hold their convention this week, should take a recess. The recess would be until a date subsequent to the Democratic State convention. By that time the Democrats' rejection of Mr. Van Nuys would be formally on record.

The point of view of Republicans who wish Mr. Van Nuys returned to the Senate is expressed by an important newspaper, Republican in politics, the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, the largest paper in the State outside Indianapolis.

"This newspaper is asking for only two things: That the Republican Party recess its State convention until after the State Democratic convention is held; and that Republicans throw their support to Van Nuys as an independent candidate.

"Mr. Van Nuys, not being a man given to falsehoods, nor one inclined to repudiate his personal convictions for political advantages, has declared recently that he is a Democrat. Of course, he is a Democrat . . . But the important point is that Senator Van Nuys, a man of real character, had the sheer courage in a moment when his political life was threatened, to stand up boldly as an American patriot and say to the President, 'I will not vote for a measure which is obviously intended to undermine our form of government.' . . . In view of the special circumstances, no Republican can wish to be a party to Van Nuys' defeat . . ."

Republicans Inclined To Name Own Candidate.

ON THE EVE OF the convention, apparently the prevailing opinion of Republican leaders is that they should go ahead and nominate a Republican. One leading candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination is former Senator James E. Watson. Mr. Watson is, to the country generally, probably the outstanding symbol of the "Old Guard" of the Republican Party. Nomination of him would have an effect on public opinion outside Indiana. Another leading candidate is a former official of the Ku Klux Klan.

The Indiana convention this week is important not only in its bearing on the fate of one Democratic Senator who opposed the President's court proposal. It is important for its bearing on the whole question of coalition or co-operation between Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats in various States throughout the country. Action by the Indiana Republicans to help return Mr. Van Nuys to the Senate would be recognized everywhere as an opening gesture toward co-operation in States where co-operation is practicable and called for.

U. S. Appeals Court Upholds 8 Officials Who Closed Banks

Federal officials were absolved yesterday in closing of the Commercial National Bank and the United States Bank following the 1933 bank holiday.

The United States Court of Appeals, upholding the District Court in effect, dismissed two suits asking damages of more than $1,000,000 filed by Wade Cooper, former president of the banks.

Cooper has sought $500,000 from eight officials of the Treasury and Justice Departments and the United States Attorney's office in one case, contending they conspired to have him indicted. In the second suit he charged the officials exceeded their authority in closing the banks and asked $560,000.

Defendants in the first suit were J. F. T. O'Connor, former comptroller of currency; Robert C. Baldwin, receiver of the Commercial National Bank; F. G. Awalt, former deputy comptroller of currency; George P. Barse, of the Treasury; Leo A. Rover, former United States Attorney; Irvin Goldstein, former Assistant United States Attorney; Gibbs Lyon, deputy comptroller of currency, and Samuel C. Simon, Justice Department accountant.

The second suit named O'Connor, Awalt, Lyons and Barse as defendants.

1938 Farm Income To Fall 2½ Billion, Estimate of Experts

By the Associated Press.

American farmers open their 1938 marketing season for major crops this week with prospects of a cash income 25 per cent below the goal set up by the new farm law.

The goal is an income of at least $10,000,000,000. On the basis of present relationships between farm and industrial prices, farmers would require that much money, Agriculture Department economists said yesterday, to give them buying power equal to that of urban residents.

As movement of the wheat crop to market got into full swing, these officials estimated the cash farm income, including Government benefit payments, from January to June, would be at least $450,000,000 below that of the comparable period of 1937. The six-month income for 1938 was estimated at $3,050,000,000.

Should commodity prices remain at or near present levels, the income for the last six months of this year could not be expected to exceed $4,500,000,000, making a total of $7,550,000,000 for 1938.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Postmasters have been instructed to ferret out all aliens in their buildings and suspend them as of June 30. The reason:

Section 5 of the act of Congress approved March 28, 1938, making appropriations for the Treasury and Postoffice Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, reads in part as follows:

"Sec. 5. No part of any appropriation contained in this act or authorized hereby to be expended shall be used to pay the compensation of any officer or employe of the Government of the United States . . . whose post of duty is in continental United States unless such officer or employe is a citizen of the United States or a person in the service of the United States on the date of approval of this act who being eligible for citizenship has filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen or who owes allegiance to the United States."

First Assistant Postmaster General W. W. Howe says officially that this law applies to employes in all classes of postoffices and includes postmasters, assistant postmasters, supervisors, clerks (including clerks in third class postoffices), carriers in the city delivery and village delivery services, substitute and temporary employes, special delivery messengers, janitors and cleaners, clerks in charge of contract stations, all coming within. Comments the First Assistant Postmaster General:

"Postmasters are put on notice immediately to canvass their personnel and to suspend from duty at the close of business June 30 any alien who has not filed his first naturalization papers. A report should be forwarded to the department respecting any such persons." Postmasters are told that failure to comply with the order will result in disallowance in accounts of any illegal payments.

There may be a general cleaning up all the way around, because citizenship is being made the first prerequisite of employment under the new order that definitely is setting in.

The commission announces open competitive examinations for several jobs: Assistant lighthouse keeper in the lighthouse service. The salary ranges from $1,320 to $1,620; salaries for light attendant range from $1,620 to $1,680. The age limits are 18 and 48 . . . Shipfitter, Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C. Entrance salary ranges from $6.91 to $7.87 per diem. A previous examination resulted in too many ineligibles and qualified persons are urged to apply . . . Operator, steam roller in the National Capital Parks. The entrance salary is $1,680. Applicants must have had experience in the operation of steam rollers (not the convention kind), must possess a District of Columbia engineer's license and not have passed their fiftieth birthday . . .

Two Department of Commerce employes will be retired July 1. They are Lemuel A. Carruthers, Census Bureau, 37 years 11 months' service, and Mary E. Black, Foreign and Domestic Commerce, 27 years 5 months' service . . . The District of Columbia Department, A. F. G. E., is sponsoring a tour to New York City and Atlantic City over the Fourth of July week-end. The national office will give you particulars . . . There is one Cabinet member who always can be approached by workers under him when the subject is music. He is Secretary Morgenthau, who recently called in members of the Internal Revenue Orchestra for a conference on how the orchestra is getting along. Incidentally, the I. R. Orchestra will be heard in open air concert in one of the courts of the building on Thursday. The hour will be announced.

President Relaxes Retirement Rules In Navy Reserve

President Roosevelt yesterday signed bills reorganizing the Naval and Marine Corps Reserves, allowing retired officers of the Marine Corps and Coast Guard to receive full salaries from any Government position to which they are appointed, and providing a Fleet Reserve of men who enter the reserve after service in the regular Navy.

The number of reserve officers who may serve in grades above lieutenant commander is increased and provisions for retirement of reservists are eased.

East River Boils as Underwater Fire Rages

1 This boiling water on the surface of the East River told a story yesterday of a fire 150 feet beneath the surface in the head of the $58,000,000 vehicular tunnel being constructed between Manhattan and Long Island. Engineers said fire in shoring timbers threatened collapse of the tunnel, and they maintained an air pressure of 48 pounds per square inch to prevent collapse. Leaking air made the water boil.

Signal Corps Tests Largest Mobile Sound System

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

ALICE HUGHES

THIS IS THE time of year when everybody plays the old Army game known as "Getting In and Out of New York." Of course, it's no game at all by train—merely a matter of climbing aboard. Even getting out by motor is not much of a trick, for the lower point of the State on which we crawl is very narrow, indeed, and if you clamber into the car and head her north, you're certain to come out somewhere in Westchester County. In fact, you'll see some trees.

But for sheer, back-breaking and headaching woe, I recommend driving back to the heart of Manhattan Island on Sunday evening after one of those ducky "suburban weekends." Your temples are thumping, you have been severely poisoned by fresh air, a thunderstorm is looming and you probably have a large bug down your back. Then the matter of heading into the maze of streets that make up the enormous, teeming Borough of the Bronx, which lies across the Harlem River, becomes a torment almost too terrible to bear. We Manhattanites have performed this maneuver hundreds of times—yet we are ending up always in strange and fearsome byways, half convinced that we have somehow wandered into Allentown, Pa., by mistake. No street in the Bronx ever looks familiar to the downtown New Yorker.

The driver gets frenzied, as she heads the old wagon south. All she wants in this life, or any other, is to get to her own little flat, tear off her clothes and get under that healing shower bath. But, wandering through the Bronx, it seems utterly hopeless. Then, like a miracle, comes the view of one of the Harlem River bridges, jammed with cursing drivers. But it is the path to Heaven, and in two minutes she is on Manhattan, where no driver alive can get lost, thanks to its bordering rivers! She swears she will never drive north to another week-end—but the following Saturday finds her off to another headache!

My pet society scribe says that our Prince Serge Obolensky, leading beau of the town, who helps Vincent Astor run the fun at the St. Regis Hotel, prefers vodka to any other drink. I find it hard to believe, with all the lovely potions at our command. Vodka's not a drink; it's a fatal electric shock.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husband Shed 'Three Layers of Civilization' After Wedding Day; Unhappy Wife Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married two years this month—two miserable, unhappy years for me. I need help and feel that you can help me. Within three days after we had married, to say that my husband "let down his back hair" would be too mild a way to express it. It was as though three layers of civilization had dropped from him; as though, having won me, he was at liberty to dispense with all courtesy, kindliness and thoughtfulness. It wasn't that I expected life to be a continual round of courtship, but I did expect common, everyday decency and politeness.

* * * *

To go back a bit—both of us are 30. He had been married years before, and had been divorced for seven years. His former wife remarried, and he had a little girl, aged 8, who lives with his aunt, and whose support takes a sizeable slice of his income. I continued to work after marriage, as our marriage was contingent on my being self-supporting. When we married, we took an apartment. He had talked so much about how he loved the pleasures and comforts of a home that I foresaw no trouble. But I learned all too soon that although he does love the comforts of a home, he wants none of the work connected with maintaining a home.

* * * *

He let it be known in no uncertain terms that keeping the apartment was my job, not his, and the fact that I came home as tired as he did not affect the matter. He grouches about anything and everything. Sulking is just about his chief recreation Sometimes I can trace his sulkiness back to the offending instance; other times I have no idea what it is about. He goes into a rage and sulks for an evening, and sometimes for days. Sometimes, after he has gone too far, he does a right-about-face and cannot do enough to gain my favor; but this lasts only a few days and he soon reverts to his habitual surliness.

* * * *

He is all but impossible to live with. Anything he can say, or do, to upset me seems to give him delight. He never loses an opportunity of late to say he is only awaiting the first opportunity for a job further south where he can be near his daughter, who has become the most important thing in his life, recently. He must know such a job, if found, would not pay enough for him to support me, so I presume he wants me to infer that he is going off without me.

* * * *

As it is, I have to keep him "jacked up" in regard to paying his end of household expenses. Whatever he can pass off to me, he never fails to do. In spite of this long recital of woes (and I can't begin to tell you the half of it) I believe he still cares for me. I suppose I still care for him. I must, because I do so desperately want to make a go of my marriage. But my nerves and my health are so upset now that I no longer know what to do or what to think.

I have learned that he is not liked by his office co-workers; that he is often "on the outs" with various ones and that he sulks there, too. I am all the more worried for fear this will retard his business advancement. What do your advise?

J. C. B.

Case for Referee.

DEAR J. C. B.: You have painted your husband pretty black, and yet he must possess some good points not mentioned here, else you would not "still care for him," and still "desperately want to make a go" of your marriage. It occurs to me that you may be more intent on keeping book on your husband's sins of omission and commission than you are intent upon imaginatively vizualizing and optimistically investigating every potentially constructive approach to the happy solution of your problem.

* * * *

In other words, let's put it this way: Which are you most concerned with—proving a watertight case against your husband or finding a way around the mountain? Everything you have said here is against him, and yet you say you haven't "told the half" that might be said on the score. Nothing whatever is said in his favor. Is that because there is nothing to say in his defense? Or is it because you prefer to dwell on the darker side of the picture? So long as you are determined to make the worst of a bad situation, there is nothing that anyone can do, by way of advice or suggestion, to help you.

* * * *

The only remedy for this situation is to face the fundamental, unalterable facts honestly, and chart your future course accordingly. For instance, only after you have exhausted every conceivable effort to establish a two-way sympathetic accord with your husband; only after your most patient and generous concessions on every front have met with rebuff, or have failed to bear fruit of reciprocal kind; only after your most unselfish, indefatigable and intelligent efforts to find the saving solution have come to naught, are you justified in depicting your husband as the black-hearted, hopelessly non-co-operative villian of the piece..

* * * *

If, after having brought such an attitude into play, the day nevertheless comes when you are forced to conclude (as the result of unavailing efforts at understanding and co-operation) that your husband is "impossible to live with," and if your conclusion to that effect is corroborated by the findings of some disinterested referee who has heard both sides of the story and who has examined the performance (severally and jointly) of both parties, then you are confronted with an inescapable social necessity—almost, one might say, the moral obligation (based on the natural law of self-preservation)—to bring about the legal dissolution of the union.

* * * *

This, obviously, is a case which calls for a referee if the fundamental difficulty is to be defined. The problem should be audited in detail by some disinterested, fair-minded third person—your pastor, your family physician, a psychiatrist (perhaps Dr. Elmer Klein, of the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest; telephone ADams 1033), a family friend or relative whose judgment is respected by both parties, or any other such person as may occur to you.

* * * *

I suggest that you come out in the open with your grievance against your husband; tell him frankly that your health, nerves and tolerance have reached the breaking point; that it is imperative that your marriage be established—and at once—on a different and more harmonious basis, or abandoned altogether; and that, in your opinion, its only salvation lies in each of you getting a saving slant on what ails himself, what is wrong with his attitude toward his partner, and what can be done to correct these respective shortcomings. Suggest your pastor, your doctor, a psychiatrist, Dr. Klein, of the Life Adjustment Center, some friend or relative, as a possible soul-doctor in the emergency, and let him take his choice of whom to consult. Tell him you will follow his lead in the matter.

* * * *

If he refuses to fall in with such a suggestion, if he pooh-poohs the idea that there is anything wrong with him, you will have rather conclusive evidence right there that he is, indeed, a hopeless case; that he is the wretched victim of some obscure psychological twist; that he is perfectly content to live miserably and inflict misery on his marriage partner; that he is the sort of man with whom no self-respecting woman could live in tolerable peace, dignity and happiness.

* * * *

It is my intuitive conviction that your husband is not "fit to live with," as we say; that, in order to be fit to live with, he would have to submit himself to a long and tedious process of complete re-education of social and emotional attitudes; that he has a streak of sadism in his nature (in other words, he derives some obscure emotional satisfaction out of inflicting suffering, humiliation and distress upon the object of his tainted affections). I think, for instance, that his recently developed overweening devotion to his daughter is nothing more than a nasty thrust at you; a barb designed, consciously or unconsciously, to give you jealous concern.

* * * *

But I think you are a little on the immature side yourself, in the sense that you are as yet unprepared to treat firmly with facts; to come courageously to grips with reality; to accept disappointment and disillusionment as an inescapable portion of life. I think, indeed, that you can prove yourself, in the final analysis, to have been adequate in this situation, only by first bringing all your resources to bear on solving the problem in such a way as might keep the marriage a going concern. And, if such efforts fail, by making a firm, unhurried, cool and collected exit out of the picture. Incidentally, don't overlook the fact that though your husband may be an unmitigated heel, nevertheless you were free, white, and 21 (as the saying goes) when you contracted marriage with him; and that, though he is a cad, you are currently content to be (as I once heard a social worker say) his "more or less willing victim."

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

COLLEGIATE styles will run to checks, plaids and daring color combinations, it was revealed at a college fashion show held last week at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. Above are pictured three of the models displayed. At left is shown the ever dependable tweed skirt worn with a gay plaid jacket. At center, the plaid skirt is worn with a white sweater and a Shetland tweed jacket. Note the use of all-around pleats in the skirt, giving it a graceful swing. At right, a reversible corduroy coat is worn with matching slacks, sweater and the inevitable pearl beads.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Exercise Is Much Better Normalizer of Figure Than Is Dieting.

By Ida Jean Kain.

TOO MANY people diet and not enough people exercise. You cannot expect diet to fix your figure when the trouble is laziness. Diet will take off weight, but what you want is a better figure—and that takes exercise.

If your weight is normal, dieting will not give you curves. It is more likely to give you nerves! Worst of all, it can even exaggerate the bad points of your figure by taking the weight off the wrong places.

Exercise, however, is the great normalizer. It builds where we need a little filling out, and reduces where unwanted fat has accumulated. For the normal weight, exercise is a far better health measure than diet, and it does lovely things for the figure.

Strengthen Your Legs.

With physical inactivity, weight tends always to settle below the waistline, and you can lose your figure without being a pound over the weight that is normal for you. In order to take off these unflattering inches, exercise must be directed to the lower portion of the figure, and today's group of exercises were designed particularly to promote symmetry of the hips, thighs and buttocks, and to strengthen the muscles in the lower legs.

Fifteen minutes of regular exercise of this type can make your figure over, but there must be no lapses from your daily program if you are to see an appreciable improvement in your measurements. Don't skip a day or two and think you can make up by exercising longer or more strenuously. When you are working off inches, a quarter of an hour's daily exercise will do more good and will bring results more quickly than any amount of occasional exercise.

Swinging Exercises.

Begin with the leg-swinging exercises, which are the most slimming that have been invented for the hips and thighline.

POSITION: Standing on toes, knees straight, and hand resting on table for support.

MOVEMENT: Raise leg sideward as high as possible with the body poised on toes, both knees straight. Perform slowly, tensing all muscles. Repeat ten times with one leg, then with the other.

You will find that kicking over a chair takes down a desk-chair spread in short order. Begin by kicking over the chair seat, and finish by kicking over the back.

POSITION: Stand with chair in front of you, seat toward you. Brace one hand against table for support.

MOVEMENT: Swing the leg up and over the chair seat, touching foot and floor on either side. Perform five to ten times with each leg. Then repeat the entire exercise, standing at the side of the chair, so that the leg circles sideward over the chair seat.

When you became limber enough, use the same set of exercises but kick over the back of the chair rather than the seat.

If those exercises won't bring your hips down, nothing will!

'Old-Fashioned' Embroidery Now Up-to-Date Thing

Paris (U.P.). — Good "old-fashioned" embroidery suddenly has come very much up-to-date if to judge by the mid-season evidence offered by Paris dressmakers.

Yarn embroidery silk, bead strings or raffia—there is a distinctive place for each. Flowers embroidered in bright blue yarn, and leaves of green, grow out of three flower pots appliqued across the front of Robert Piquet's pale pink shantung dress. One of the pots sits squarely in the front of the bodice. The other two are set a few inches below each shoulder.

Simple outline stitch in yarn forms alternate stripes of red and blue on a backless white knit dress of Anny Blatt's. A darning stitch in brown yarn runs up and down and across a mustard-colored knit suit to form a plaid effect. A heavy over-and-over embroidery binds the edges of a black wool bolero worn over a matching dress.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

In the Park.

"Mamma, when is the picnic going to begin?"

"It's already begun. Here we are out here in the nice grass under all these beautiful trees——"

"But I mean when are we going to eat?"

"Oh, not for a long time yet. Look! Look! See the pretty little squirrel!"

"Mamma, are we going to have any bananas?"

"I think so. Listen to the little bird. He goes 'Cheep,' 'Cheep.' Can you tell what he's saying?"

"How many bananas are we going to have, Mamma?"

"Oh, half a dozen, I guess. See, there's another squirrel! Look at his bushy tail."

"Mamma, when are we going to eat the bananas?"

"Oh, not for a long time."

"But I thought we were going too have a picnic."

"We are having a picnic. People don't have picnics just to eat. Come here and I'll tell you a nice story about the little gray squirrel——"

"Mamma, are we going to have any cake?"

"Yes, of course. Don't you want to hear about the little squirrel?"

"Mamma are we going to have chocolate cake?"

"I think so. Come on, let's walk around and look at the trees. Aren't they beautiful? See that big one? That's an oak."

"Mamma, can't I look just once in the basket?"

"No; you'll upset things. Do you know what that great big oak tree came from?"

"When will we eat the cake, Mamma?"

"When we have our lunch."

"When will that be?"

"Oh, after awhile. Look! Look at the little sparrow down there hunting for a worm."

"Mamma, will we have any ice cream at the picnic?"

"I don't know—yet. See there's a robin! Let Mamma tell you all about the little birdies——"

"Mamma, I want a piece of chocolate cake now."

"But darling, you've just eaten. Wait a little while and Mamma'll give you a nice orange. Let's see if we can find a four-leaf clover."

"Mamma, how much longer will we have to wait for the picnic?"

"Darling, I've tried to tell you that we're having the picnic now. That's what a picnic is—being outdoors this way, close to Mother Nature, and seeing the trees and the grass and the birdies and the beautiful clouds——"

"Mamma! Mamma!"

"Yes?"

"When we have the picnic, can I have two bananas?"

Evening Gown Made of Flowers

Paris (U.P.).—An evening gown made entirely of fresh flowers!

No, it's not the dream of a delirious florist, but an actual fashion fact witnessed by several hundred persons who attended a fancy dress ball at Cannes. The Begum Aga Khan, dark-eyed Indian beauty and one of Paris' most beautifully dressed women, was the wearer of the dress made of fresh roses.

The gown was created by Heim's for the Begum, and it was inspired from the sari, the loosely draped Indian robe. The sari was covered with vari-shaded red roses which gave the effect of rose noire when seen a few feet away. Dark red roses added a dramatic contrast to the edging of the sari. The roses were sewn on at the last minute, having first been specially treated so that they would keep their freshness throughout the evening.

Navy Fetes Head Social List in D. C.

Yugoslav Minister Is Host for Staff of the Javran.

Brazilian Ship, Almivante Soldanha, Arrives Today.

The Navy—both foreign and domestic—holds the social spotlight for the next few days in a week which is as socially gay as any at the peak of the midwinter season.

The opening gun in a round of parties for visiting seamen was fired yesterday by the Yugoslav Minister, Constantin Fotitch, who welcomed to Washington Capt. Yerko Kachich, commanding officer, and senior members of the staff of the Yugoslav training ship Javran, which landed in New York last year. The Minister, incidentally, will soon be on the high seas himself, having made reservations to sail tomorrow on the Normandie for a vacation in Europe.

Minister Holds Luncheon and Dinner

The envoy squired the visitors to Arlington yesterday morning while they laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. They later visited the Navy Department, returning to the legation for a luncheon at which the Chief of Naval Operations, Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, was the ranking guest. Others in the company included Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, chief of naval intelligence; Commander William Popham, Wallace Murray and Harold Tittman, of the State Department; the Counselor of the Yugoslav legation, Dr. Vladimir Rybar; the Secretary of legation, Rastko Petrociv, and Dr. Stoianovitch, Yugoslav Consul General in New York.

Members of the Yugoslav colonly in Washington were in the majority at the dinner which Envoy Fotitch gave last evening for Capt. Kachich. There were 18 present.

The visiting officers will conclude their visit today, returning to New York to board the Javran.

Brazilian Ship Will Arrive Today

At 10 o'clock this morning guns will be fired at the Washington Navy Yard in salute to the Brazilian training ship Almivante Saldanha, which is arriving for a week's visit. Commander Washington Perry de Almeida is in charge.

Festivities begin with a reception this afternoon, at which the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettingill will be hosts. Assisting Mrs. Pettingill during the afternoon will be a group of Navy wives, including Mrs. Ralston S. Holmes, Mrs. James Otto Richardson, Mrs. Ray Spear, Mrs. William Robert Munroe, Mrs. Robert Griffin, Mrs. William Popham and Mrs. John Dale Price. The Misses Sally Holmes, Louise Popham and Patricia Griffin will also be on hand to help the hostess.

This evening Joaquin de Souza Leao, Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, will give a large dinner at the embassy in honor of Capt. Almeida, and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy is to be host on Thursday at a men's luncheon for the commanding officer.

Commander and Mrs. W. H. P. Blandy will give an informal tea for the visitors at their residence tomorrow afternoon. Commander and Mrs. Blandy spent four years in Rio de Janeiro when the former was Naval Attache at the American Embassy, and later an instructor in the Brazilian War College.

That evening the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Reis will give a dinner at the Shoreham, at which 24 will be present. Senor Leao will give a tea dance on Friday afternoon, and the captain and officers of the ship will entertain at two men's dinners, one on Thursday and one on Saturday, aboard the ship, and honor Mr. Edison and Senor Leao.

The officers will say "thank you" for the hospitality they have enjoyed at a shipboard reception on Sunday before they return to New York.

Off for Her Summer Vacation

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Yolando Alfaro, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard J. Alfaro, left last evening for an indefinite stay at Abingdon, Va. She is photographed here at the home of her parents in Wesley Heights.

Jean O. Christie Wed in Vermont

Miss Jean Ogilvy Christie, of Washington, was married yesterday to Robert Claus, son of Henry T. Claus, editor of the Boston Transcript, and Mrs. Claus. The ceremony was performed in Rutland, Vt., at the Universalist Church parsonage by the Rev. John Q. Parkhurst. The couple were attended by Paul Brookes, of Alden, Mass., and Miss Catherine Anderson, of West Newton, Mass.

Following a two-week trip in the White Mountains and at North Haven, Me., Mr. and Mrs. Claus will live in Arlington. He is junior archives assistant at the National Archives Building in Washington.

The bridegroom was graduated from Tufts College, Medford, Mass., and the Fletcher School of International Law and Diplomcay.

The former Miss Christie is an alumna of George Washington University at well as of the Fletcher School. She did graduate work at Radcliffe College last year.

Bettises Living In Brentwood

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell Bettis, who were married June 7 at the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, have returned from a wedding trip and are residing in Brentwood Village.

The bride is the former Miss Louella Baily, daughter of Mrs. Abraham Williamson Baily, and Mr. Bettis is the son of Maurice L. Bettis, of Alexandria.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Abraham W. Baily, wore a gown made with a lace bodice and silk net skirt, with a fingertip veil held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Baily served as the bride's only attendant. Lloyd Bauman was best man, and the ushers were George Baily, brother of the bride; Alvin Gheen, James Thompson and Donald Hammerlund. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Craig Wylie Will Marry Miss Fowler Saturday

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Angela Fowler, of Katonah, N. Y., and Craig Wylie, son of Mrs. Katherine Wylie, of this city. The ceremony will take place on Saturday at the home of the bride-elect.

The prospective bridegroom is an instructor at St. Paul's School and met Miss Fowler there when she came to visit her younger brother who was a student at the

Willmott Lewises Honor the Merrills At Cocktail Party

Yesterday Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis entertained at cocktails in honor of Commander and Mrs. Stanton Merrill, who recently returned to Washington to live. Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis will leave on Friday to spend the holidays at Lynne, Conn., as guests of Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Mrs. Pearsons Rust, and then Lady Lewis will proceed to Winter Harbor, Me., for the summer.

Mrs. James Clement Dunn will entertain at a buffet supper tomorrow following the Garrett-Zuberbuhler wedding, and the following night Mrs. Merriam Curtis will give a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of the United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick Sterling.

Kennedy Heads Notables Sailing

When the Normandie pulls out into the Atlantic from New York tomorrow she will have on board a number of distinguished passengers headed by Joseph Kennedy, United States envoy to Great Britain.

Other passengers will include Arthur Krock, Frank Kent, Bernard Baruch and Mrs. Hendrick Eustis, of Washington, formerly of New York. Mr. Baruch and Mr. Kent will go to Carlsbad for the cure, and Mr. Krock will spend ten days in London before returning to this country. Mr. Baruch will go to his place in Scotland for the grouse season in late August and September.

Mr. and Mrs. Felipe F. Vidal, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, are at the Carlton.

Johnson-Ladd Wedding Held

St. Mark's Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding at noon yesterday of Miss Miriam Virginia Ladd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard G. Ladd, of Washington, to Keith C. Johnson, son of Mrs. John Geraughty, of Fullerton, Calif., and the late Roy Johnson.

The Rev. William R. Moody officiated at the ceremony, which was held in a setting of Easter lilies. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white organza made with puffed sleeves and trimmed with fabric flowers. Her three-tiered tulle veil was held by a Juliet cap of pearls, and she carried a white prayer book.

Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bernard D. Ladd, served as matron of honor, wearing white marquisette made on redingote style and a white silk hat. She carried sweet peas in several shades.

William C. Redding, of Hamilton, Kans., was best man, and the ushers were Raymond A. Fisher and John Buscher, of Washington.

When she left for her wedding trip shortly after the ceremony the bride was wearing a navy blue sheer with pin stripes and a matching cape. Accessories of navy blue and white completed her costume. The bride's mother was also attired in navy blue sheer, and Mrs. Timon Couvert, the bridegroom's aunt, with whom he made his home, wore a white silk frock.

After a two months' wedding trip by motor, the couple will reside in Washington.

The bride is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College where she was a member of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity. Her husband also attended Wilson Teachers College, where he was a member of the same fraternity, and is now a science teacher at Eliot Junior High School.

Millers Take Wedding Trip

Now on a motor trip to Cape May and Atlantic City, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Stevens Miller, jr., were married Saturday afternoon at Central Presbyterian Church. Dr. James H. Taylor officiated. Mrs. Miller is the former Miss Nancy Wells Vann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Jasper Vann, of Washington. Mr. Miller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn S. Miller, of Pittsburgh.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of chantilly lace fashioned on princess lines and terminating in a long train edged with tulle. Her veil was draped from a cap of rose point lace and a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Obie Lee Warrington served her sister as matron of honor and was attired in dusty rose lace with a matching transparent hat. The frock was made with a bolero and edged with tiers of ruffles. She carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and talisman roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Martha Belle Buchanan and Miss Alice McKenzie, cousins of the bride. Miss Buchanan wore powder blue lace, while Miss McKenzie was in chartreuse lace. Robert Roadley was best man, while ushers were William Richards, Herbert Garrett, Robert Stacey and Enoch J. Vann, jr., brother of the bride.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, her mother, Mrs. Vann, was in hydrangea lace, while Mrs. Miller, mother of the bridegroom, had chosen blue and white chiffon. Those assisting were Mrs. Omar B. Buchanan, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr.; Mrs. Robert J. Swingle, Mrs. Josie T. MacKenzie, Mrs. S. G. Boykin and Mrs. Edna Mann.

The former Miss Vann is a graduate of Teachers College and is a member of Lambda Chi Sorority. Both she and her husband are members of the A Capella Choir of First Congregatoinal Church.

On their return from their wedding trip after July 15 they will live at 3709 Thirteenth street.

Miss Mary Louise Johnson Wed To British Navy Man in England

Couple First Met in Honolulu and Later in Paris; Ceremony Takes Place at Home of Bridgegroom's Family in Worcestershire.

She met him in Honolulu, met him again in Paris and married him yesterday in England.

In spite of all its "international" angles, the wedding of Miss Mary Louise Johnson to Lieut. Commander Charles Alfred Rolfe Gibb, Royal Navy (retired) is primarily of most interest to Washington for the bride is a Washington girl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Evarts Johnson, of this city. The ceremony took place in the church at Saintsbury, Worcestershire, where Lieut. Comdr. Gibb has relatives living.

He is the son of Mrs. Stevens, of Heacham, Norfolk, England, and the late C. A. W. Gibb. He is now stationed at Prestwick, Scotland, where he holds the post of chief ground instructor with the Scottish aviation forces.

He and his bride, following their wedding trip, will make Scotland their home and have selected the picturesque town of Ayr, which is near Prestwick, as their future residence.

The former Miss Johnson attended school here, studying first at Holton Arms and later at the Sacred Heart Convent, which is located at Torresdale, Pa. She is a member of the Washington branch of the Junior League.

Twelve years ago, while vacationing in Honolulu, she first met Lieut. Comdr. Gibb. Then last summer, they met once more and their acquaintanceship blossomed into romance.

Accompanied by her father, the bride sailed for England on June 10. Mr. Johnson will return to this country immediately following the wedding. Mrs. Johnson, the bride's mother, did not go to England for the ceremony, but remained in the United States. At present she is at her summer home at Monterey, Pa., in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Jules Demonets Building a Home In Michigan Town

Mr. and Mrs. Jules Demonet 2d, who were married June 8 in the Church of St. Francis the Apostle, in Detroit, are building a home in Huntington Woods, Mich., and will occupy it in the fall.

Mrs. Demonet is the former Miss Henrietta Charlotte Hanba, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hanba, of Detroit, and Mr. Demonet originally made his home here. He is a graduate of the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University and is now in business in Detroit.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, had as her maid of honor and only attendant Miss Virginia Norwalk. Walter Hanba, brother of the bride, was best man. The ceremony was followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride.

THE SCISSORS WAVE CUT

IN OUR ANTOINE SALON

If you like soft natural waves . . . if you do not demand a highly styled coiffure, you'll find our Scissors Wave ideal. The method is simple, but specialized. First, your hair is pushed up to locate the natural wave. Then, we thin and reshape your hair underneath and push it into place so that it falls into soft waves that mould your head. If your hair has the slightest inclination to wave . . . an inclination you may not recognize . . . it may be encouraged, by proper cutting and training, to retain this wave. To add further beauty, we suggest one of our Antoine permanents for the ends. Our trained experts will advise and consult with you.

IN NO WAY MUST THE SCISSORS WAVE BE CONFUSED WITH OUR ANTOINE CREATIVE COIFFURES WHICH ARE GREATLY IN DEMAND BY THOSE WHOSE PREFERENCE IS FOR THE HIGHLY STYLED HAIR DRESSING SO SUCCESSFULLY ACCOMPLISHED BY OUR ANTOINE ARTISTS.

Business Women Install Miss Kinsella for 2d Term

Earlene White Gets Pledge of Co-operation From Both Members and Officers at Congressional Country Club Ceremony.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

There is no leadership without "followers," Miss Earlene White president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, told members of the Washington organization last night at installation of officers at Congressional Country Club. Installing Miss Nina Kinsella, for a second term as president, and others on her official staff, Miss White asked a pledge of co-operation.

"The club adopts the program and the officers put it into action, but it cannot be carried through to success without the understanding and loyal support of the membership," Miss White pointed out. "The officers are chosen by the club and have indicated their willingness to assume responsibility, but without co-operation from the members they can accomplish little."

After taking the pledge of service from the officers, Miss White asked the club members to rise, pledging their support.

President Just Home From Regional Meetings

The national president has just returned from a circuit of three regional conferences of the federation. The first was in Buck Hill Falls, Pa., with clubs of the northeast region represented; the second in Omaha, with those of the west central region and the last in Grand Canyon, Utah, with those of the western region. They were preliminary to the national board meeting July 10 to 15 in Grand Rapids, Mich. Three other regional conferences will follow; those of the southeastern region in Charleston, S. C. August 20 to 23; north central in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in October, and the south central in Oklahoma City, in November.

The purpose of the regional meetings, said Miss White, is to develop and co-ordinate the national program. Last year the theme "Our Town's Business," was carried out by individual clubs in a study of their own municipalities. This year the theme is "My Business and Yours." A program will be worked out on this basis at the coming board meeting, she said, emphasizing responsibility, of business and professional women for taking an intelligent part in community, state and national affairs and, as the country deals in international situations, to do their part to promote international peace.

Judge Lucy Howorth Again Vice President

Other officers installed, in addition to Miss Kinsella were: Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, vice president and Miss Mary Nellinger, corresponding secretary; both re-elected; Miss Margaret E. Rolston, recording secretary; Miss Adriana VanKooy, treasurer and Miss Bertha M. Neinburg and Miss Emily E. Clark, directors.

The program included beside the installation and address by Miss White, a comedy skit presented in honor of the new officers, entitled "Fitness for Office." Miss Margaret Baird was in charge of this.

The program was arranged by Miss Elizabeth Mann, retiring recording secretary. Miss Mann presented as another part of the entertainment a group of students from International House, who appeared in costume and gave a program of Spanish and Czechoslovakian songs and dances. The dancers were Miss Frances Clark and Eugene Ysita. Miss Joan Stika and Leopold Wagner sang, accompanied by Mary Klementik.

Last night's dinner was the second within the month arranged by the Business and Professional Women's Club which has been attended by rain. Despite the weather, 100 members and guests were present. The affair marks the official close of the club season, but this summer, as in the past, there will probably be a picnic or two to bring the members together informally before regular meetings begin in the fall.

Songs, Dances Given Here for Spain Children

Daughter of Mexican Ambassador Performs on the Guitar.

Spanish songs and dances were on the program given in connection with the benefit dance sponsored last night at the Powhatan Hotel by the Women's Committee to Aid the Children of Spain. Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, played the guitar and sang Mexican and Spanish songs, and Sophia Delza, American dancer, presented a group of numbers. The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios and the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera were guests of honor.

The ballroom, to which the party was transferred from the roof because of the rain, was decorated with balloons of all colors, and the costumes of the performers added brilliance to the scene. Miss Delza's costumes, like her dances, were all variations of the Spanish idiom, but were strikingly modern. For her first number, "In the Arena," to music by Valverde, she wore brilliant gold and green. For her second dance, to music by Granados, she wore a severe black velvet gown, with a touch of white in her hair. She also used an antique Spanish lace fan.

Her third number was "We Weep for Spain," in which she wore a stylized Spanish costume of black and orange rust, one sleeve of which was black and the other orange. Her final dance, was variations on a gypsy theme and her costume a modern version of a Spanish gypsy dress, in purple and cerise. In all her numbers there was a rhythm of heels and castanets. Miss Thelma Stein was her accompanist.

In addition to the program presented by Miss Belza and Senorita Castillo Najera, there was informal singing of Latin American airs by the guests to whom they were familiar, with Dr. Ernesto Galarzo, of the Pan American Union, playing his guitar.

The committee which arranged the affair included: Mrs. Gardner Jackson, chairman; Mr. Jackson, Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Dr. and Mrs. Clark Warburton, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. David Barr, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meckenzie, Miss Peggy Duffy, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Straus.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Smith Brookhart, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood Collier, Dr. and Mrs. Galarza, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, Mr and Mrs. David Kreegar, Dr. and Mrs. William Chase, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Dodek, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Friendly, Mrs. Lincoln Dembitz, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dembitz, Robert Marshall, C. A. Glassgold, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weston, Mr. and Mrs. George Terborg, Dr. and Mrs. Constant Southworth, Mr. and Mrs. Mercer Evans and Mrs. Dexter Otey.

Zonta Meeting Set This Week

Forceful action in behalf of women in business and the professions is forecast for the annual convention of Zonta International, organization of executive women who have distinguished themselves in their respective fields. The convention will be held at Banff, Alberta, Canada, June 30-July 2. Delegates will assemble at Chicago from all parts of the country, proceeding from there by special train. Representing the Washington Zonta Club will be Emma T. Hahn, delegate; Caroline Longfellow, alternate, and May Moyers McElroy, who is candidate for vice president.

Coming before the convention in the form of recommendations, recently cleared through Zonta's five district conferences, will be: Opposition to restrictive legislation affecting adult women in business and professions, including all forms of clerical work; adoption of objective "Equality of men and women in civil service without regard to marital status;" urging the President of the United States to issue an executive order placing on preferred lists for re-appointment those persons dismissed under former Section 213-A; the creation of a suitable Zonta memorial to Amelia Earhart, who was a member of the confederation and amendment of the national labor relations act "to place equal responsibility upon both labor and employers in the fulfillment of a contract."

Y.W.C.A. Issues Service Booklet

The Washington branch of the Young Women's Christian Association has just issued a comprehensive booklet describing the "friendly services" the organization offers to the community. It is the first time since 1933 such a pamphlet has been prepared and many new features have been developed at the "Y. W." during that period.

The publicity committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Harold D. Hynds, is responsible for the publication. Members who worked with her were: Mrs. Henry Abbott, Mrs. Ernest S. Griffith, Mrs. A. J. Montgomery, Mrs. C. Mortimer Palmer, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. Howard S. Piquet, Mrs. Donald Roberts, Mrs. C. Rogers Arundell, and members ex-officio, Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president, of the board of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Hettie P. Anderson, executive secretary; Miss Catherine C. Jones and Miss Louise Danforth, of the professional staff.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Queen Goes House Hunting.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

A queen may be without a throne,
Nor have a home to call her own.

—Mrs. Bumble.

Queen Bumble of the Bee folk, knows whereof she speaks. To this day she does not know just where or how she spent the winter. That she wasn't awake is a certainty. When cool weather came in the fall she crawled into some place that offered shelter, too drowsy to know just where the place was or what it was like, and there she spent the winter. Now that sweet Mistress Spring had come to stay, Queen Bumble had awakened and was buzzing over the Green Meadows. She had been alone when she left her home in the fall to seek shelter for the winter and she was alone now, a queen without subjects and without a home.

"Buzz-z-z," said Queen Bumble almost in one of Peter Rabbit's ears. "Buzz-z-z. Do you know of any empty houses around here, Peter Rabbit? Do you?"

"Are you looking for a house?" inquired Peter.

"Buzz-z-z, do you think I am given to asking foolish questions?" asked Queen Bumble somewhat testily.

Peter hastened to deny that such a thought had entered his head. "My, how handsomely you are dressed!" said he. "Black and yellow are most becoming to you. I hope you spent a pleasant winter."

"I don't know anything about the winter and I don't want to know anything about it," buzzed Queen Bumble. "We Bees are summer folk, as you ought to know. What I want now is a house, and I want it right away. I've a lot to do, and summers are short. I should be gathering pollen right this minute, for already some flowers have a supply. I saw some fine pollen just a few minutes ago when I was getting a sip of nectar. It was a great temptation, Peter Rabbit. It was a gerat temptation to fill my pollen baskets. But what is the use of gathering pollen until I have a place to put it? Tell me that, Peter Rabbit."

Of course, Peter couldn't tell her that, and Queen Bumble buzzed on. "If I could find an emtpty house that is all I would ask. Yes, sir, it is all I would ask. It seems as if there should be an empty house around here somewhere, but every house I have found so far has been occupied. It is discouraging. That's waht it is—discouraging."

"Just what kind of a house is it you are looking for?" asked Peter.

Queen Bumble alighted on a clover blossom right in front of Peter and sipped some nectar from it. "Buzz-z-z," said she, "do you mean to tell me that one who has lived on and around the Green Meadows as long as you have, Peter Rabbit, doesn't know what kind of a vacant house a Bumblebee wants? I want an empty Mouse nest, one in the ground preferred. That is the kind of a house I like best. Give me a good Mouse nest and I can fix it up to suit me in no time. If I can't find such a nest I will make use of some other snug retreat on or in the ground. You ought to know where there is an empty home of a Mouse."

"Are you looking for a house?" inquired Peter.

"I don't," confessed Peter. "You see I never have been interested in houses of that kind and so I've never looked for them. Why don't you go ask Danny Meadow Mouse if he knows of an empty house?"

"I don't know where he lives," retorted Queen Bumble.

"It isn't very far from here. I know where he lives and I'll show you if you want me to," replied Peter.

"Lead on," buzzed Queen Bumble.

"So off went Peter, lipperty-lipperty-lip, and behind him flew Queen Bumble. Had you seen them and not known better, you might have thought that he was trying to run away from her.

Now, Peter did know where Danny's home was. He had stumbled across it quite by accident a day or two before. I suspect that this may have been one reason why Danny Meadow Mouse suddenly decided to move. Anyway, Peter led Queen Bumble straight there. Queen Bumble went in to look it over. There was no one at home.

China Refuses To Let German Staff Go Home

Fear Secrets Will Be Passed On to Japan Believed Reason for Move.

By Victor Keen.

Hankow, June 27.—The German military advisers to the Chinese government, who recently received orders from Berlin to return home, will not be permitted to leave tomorrow as they had planned, as the result of an order from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The order was believed prompted by the fact that Germany is following a pro-Japanese policy. The Chinese government takes the position that the advisers might reveal important military information about Chnia which Germany might then impart to Japan.

It is indicated here that Dr. Oskar P. Trautmann, the German ambassador to China, also will be recalled.

The German advisers ceased work for China last Friday. They had intended to try to obtain places on an "evacuation train" scheduled to leave here tomorrow for Canton and Hongkong.

The German military mission, headed by Baron Alexander von Falkenhausen and numbering about 50 men, has been employed by the Chinese for several years past and is reputed to have rendered highly valuable services, though not at any time in combat command since the Sino-Japanese war began almost a year ago.

London, Paris Warns Japan.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 27.—Britain and France made known today a warning to Japan to keep hands off the strategic Chinese island of Hainan, off the South China coast, and a pledge to act together to handle any "complications."

The two governments told Japan if she persisted in a reported intention to land troops on Hainan there would result "undesirable complications" and Britain and France would act as the circumstances demanded.

Commons Told of Move.

The disclosure was made in the Commons as dispatches from Tokyo said the British ambassador, Sir Robert L. Craigie, spent a half-hour today, discussing Anglo-Japanese relations with the Japanese foreign minister, Gen. Kazushige Ugaki.

Hainan is directly opposite northern French Indo-China, and lies close to the route between Hongkong and Singapore, Britain's Far Eastern strongholds.

Chinese reported Japanese troops tried on Sunday to land on the island but were repulsed by machine-gun fire.

Europe, meanwhile, closely watched Germany's movements in the Chinese-Japanese war, following the recall of Oskar Trautmann, the German ambassador to Hankow, who, with German military advisors to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, was scheduled to leave Hankow Tuesday.

War Bogs Down.

Shanghai, June 27 (AP).—Japan's war on China showed signs tonight of bogging down on all fronts.

The most active front was the Yangtze River Valley, about 200 miles by river from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's provisional capital.

The contest on this front, with Chinese troops, shore batteries and planes stubbornly opposing the up-river drive toward Hankow, was developing into a deadly game of give and take, with the Chinese reporting recapture of strong, hilly positions 20 miles below the great boom at Matochen.

The Chinese reported from these positions they were able to beat off two spirited attempts to land Japanese marine reinforcements. Japanese gunboats and troop transports had carried the drive up-river following easy capture of Anking two weeks ago. Planes of both sides ranged along the river in frequent bombing forays.

Japanese aerial operations against South China, including the island of Hainan off the Kwanutung coast, continued without any further sign that a major South China offensive was starting. Japanese troops were landed last week on Namoa Island, 20 miles off Swatow.

Reports from Tsingtao, Shantung Province, tonight said Japanese airplanes recently bombed the American Lutheran mission at Tsimo, injuring several Chinese girl students.

Stork Derby Winner Is Sued for Divorce

Toronto, June 27 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Pauline Mae Clarke, a partially successful contestant in the Millar stork derby, today was named defendant in a divorce instituted by George R. Clarke.

In the court hearing last February Mrs. Clarke testified five of her ten children were born after she separated from her husband. Four winning Toronto mothers, each of whom bore nine children in the specified period, settled $12,500 on Mrs. Clarke later for a waiver of her claims to the prize money.

Japanese Questioned On Warship Pictures

San Diego, Calif., June 27 (AP).—Jintero Tsuchiya, 36, Japanese, was questioned today after police seized a long-range camera with which he had been taking pictures on the waterfront near a score of United States Navy vessels. Authorities said the pictures he had taken were of naval vessels, but were of no value for espionage purposes.

act goes into effect, the flat minimum will be 40.

The measure provides a maximum work week of 44 hours the first year, 42 hours the second year, and 40 hours thereafter.

[Among the names most prominently discussed as likely selections for the post of administrator are S. Clay Williams, tobacco executive and one-time head of NRA; Lloyd K. Garrison, of the University of Wisconsin; Bernard Baruch, financier and former head of the War Industries Board; Richard Landsburgh, Philadelphia economist; Leon Henderson, Works Progress Administration economist, and John D. Biggers, director of the recent unemployment census. Others mentioned include Donald Richberg, former NRA head, and Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor.—Editor's note.]

The first major revisions of the 1906 Wiley Food and Drug act also became law yesterday, when the Agriculture Department announced that President Roosevelt signed before leaving for Wilmington, Del., the act passed by Congress shortly before adjournment.

Secretary Wallace described the new law as "a great step forward in the protection of the American public."

President Roosevelt approved yesterday the act establishing a separate system of unemployment insurance for the Nation's 900,000 railroad workers.

The measure substitutes a single national system for benefits which States now pay in conjunction with the Social Security program.

The act provides benefits ranging from $1.75 to $3 a day with a maximum possible annual payment of 80 times the daily rate. It must be made operative before July 1, 1939.

The President vetoed a bill restoring retirement pay to part of the 4,700 World War emergency officers removed from these benefits by the economy act.

The measure would have continued retirement pay for emergency officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who served between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, and incurred "permanent disabilities of 30 per cent or more in line of duty."

Ex-Envoy Davila Loses Rumanian Citizenship

Bucharest, June 27 (U.P.).—Charles A. Davila, who resigned early this year as Rumanian Ambassador to the United States, has been deprived of Rumanian citizenship, it was reported tonight, in accordance with a recently promulgated decree providing such measures for "anti-Rumanian activities or attitude abroad." He returned to America in May after quitting the diplomatic service.

Hague Praised in Rome.

Rome, June 27 (U.P.).—The Giornale d'Italia, mouthpiece of Italian Officialdom, today hailed Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, as having awakened "a new conscience and the first ray of light of a new dawn spreading over the United States."

Correction.

The Harris & Ewing picture published in Sunday's Post as that of the widow of Sampel Gompers, American labor leader, was actually that of Gompers' first wife. The widow, now a field supervisor in the adult education division of the WPA in New York, was wed to the late labor leader in 1921, after the death of his first wife. The Post regrets the error.

Canadian Calls Einstein Space Theory 'Bunk'

Relativity Based On Wrong Equations, Montreal Man Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, June 27.—The Einstein theory that the outer regions of space are "curved," was attacked as "pure bunk" today by Dr. W. B. Cartmel, University of Montreal scientist.

After studying a report to the American Association for the advancement of Science, meeting here, in which Dr. Herbert E. Ives, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, offered new experimental confirmation of the Einstein theory, Dr. Cartmel declared both Dr. Albert Einstein and Dr. Ives worked from a "false hypothesis."

The association met today with 1,000 Canadian and American scientists expected to attend. Dr. Cartmel's attack was believed to furnish the basis for a re-examination of the theory of relativity by physicists, mathematicians and astronomers.

The Canadian physicist, a former United States Bureau of Standards research worker, said his experiments and mathematical analysis of light show that any two stars have a space common to them, which is non-Euclidean, or in other words, has dimensions in addition to the common ones of length, width and depth.

As the distance between the two stars increases, however, non-Euclidean space "degenerates" until in infinity it becomes Euclidean, or three-dimensional space.

Palestine Strike Protests Hanging

Jerusalem, June 27 (AP).—Nearly every Jewish community in Palestine "struck" tonight against the scheduled hanging tomorrow of Benjamin Joseph, 18, a Jewish boy condemned to death under emergency military regulations, for ambushing an Arab bus.

Shops and cinemas were closed in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and elsewhere. A huge crowd sat down in front of the Tel Aviv Municipal Hall demanding an audience with the mayor.

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, June 27 (AP). Someone placed a handful of carnations today on the obscure grave of Gavrilo Prinzip, the youth whose well-aimed pistol shots 24 years ago touched off the World War.

British Anger Toward 'Do-Nothing' Policy Rises as Franco Bombs Sink 2 More Vessels

Bomb

event of war, but he was opposed to it now.

To a query as to whether he would promote a truce or armistice in Spain, Chamberlain replied his government would be ready to propose mediation "either alone or in conjunction with other countries at any time when the prospects of successful action are favorable."

Two More Ships Sunk.

Valencia, Spain, June 27 (U.P.).—Spanish insurgent planes from the Balearic Islands today bombed and destroyed two British merchant ships in the loyalist ports of Valencia and Alicante, killing three British sailors.

The new attacks, savagely answering British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's efforts to halt previous depredations by diplomatic maneuvers, brought to 17 the number of British ships attacked in Spanish waters in the last four weeks.

The Port of Gandia, south of Valencia on the eastern Mediterranean coast, was also raided by three trimotor warplanes. Twenty bombs were dropped on Gandia. No casualties were reported.

The British cruiser Arethusa was lying outside the port at the time of the attack.

Since May 1 when Generalissimo Francisco Franco intensified his blockade grip on the loyalist east coast, 14 British seamen have been killed in insurgent air forays.

The British ships wrecked today were the 4,900-ton Arlon, bombed and set on fire at her dock in Valencia, and the 4,790-ton Farnham, bombarded from the air as it unloaded a cargo of foodstuffs in the wrecked seaport of Alicante, 75 miles south of Valencia.

The three British sailors were killed aboard the Farnham. Two Spanish stevedores helping unload the cargo were wounded.

A Rumanian member of the Arlon's crew was killed and one of her British officers was wounded.

Both vessels were wrapped in flames by the incendiary bombs of the raiding junkers type (German) planes and the Arlon was sinking rapidly tonight. Fire aboard the Farnham was extinguished.

Loyalists Infuriated.

The new attacks aroused public anger to high pitch in the loyalist port cities, particularly in Alicante, the target of raids for three successive days. There were growing demands for retaliatory attacks "which must be aimed beyond the frontiers of Spain."

The Barcelona government redoubled its appeals to Great Britain and France for urgent action.

Government officials, private citizens and the press blamed Italians and Germans serving Franco for the murderous raids and said because of these foreign elements, any retaliatory action must be aimed at foreigners "beyond the frontiers of Spain."

The government's next move in regard to the air raids, occurring with quickened pace and terror, was expected to depend largely upon the activities of the international commission which will begin its duties tomorrow at Toulouse, across the French frontier, to investigate bombings of civilian cities.

Commission Approved.

Barcelona, June 27 (AP)—The Spanish government tonight published a note to Great Britain approving the establishment of a neutral commission to investigate air raids on unfortified Spanish cities.

Government Lines Hold.

Hendaye, France, (at the Spanish Frontier), June 27 (AP).—Government forces on the Teruel and Onda sectors in eastern Spain held firmly before repeated insurgent attacks today and countered with offensives of their own.

Dispatches from Sarrion, 22 miles southeast of Teruel and 45 miles northwest of Valencia, said government militia there captured strategic points dominating the countryside for several miles.

Insurgent assaults were said to have been halted brusquely by reinforced government forces near Villareal and Bechi, in the Onda sector.

A single insurgent success during the day's fighting was reported in government dispatches. Barcelona troops admitted having withdrawn from Sauveur Monastery, about three miles north of Onda after resisting insurgent attacks for several days.

Duce Holds War Council.

Rome, June 27 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini late today conferred with leaders of his armed forces on questions of military character" as Fascist leaders admitted the bombing of two more British ships in Spanish waters had spiked European tension with new complicatoins.

It was reported, after the ship bombings by Spanish nationalist planes at Alicante and Valencia, that Prime Minister Nevill Chamberlain of Great Britain had sent a telegram to Il Duce concerning the attacks.

British and Italian diplomats insisted they had no knowledge of any such telegram, but the report gained significance in view of dispatches from London that an influential section of British opinion believes Mussolini consented to continued attacks on British ships

Ex-Policeman, Bomber, Is Given 2 Years to Life

Los Angeles, June 27 (U.P.).—Earle E. Kynette, formerly head of the police "spy" squad, tonight was sentenced to from two year to life imprisonment for the attempted bomb assassination of Harry J. Raymond, a private vice investigator and critic of the city administration.

Threat of War Increasing in Chaco Dispute

Neutrals of Six Countries Struggle to Maintain Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, June 27.—A new threat of war between Bolivia and Paraguay over the Chaco desert grew tonight as representatives of six neutral countries struggled to prevent a breakdown in territorial negotiations.

The neutrals are trying to fix a boundary to end a century-old dispute over the Chaco area, as large as continental Italy but of doubtful economic value.

Paraguay's aspirations to retain nearly all the territory gained in the three-year war from 1932 to 1935, and refusal to yield Bolivia a port on the Upper Paraguay River deadlocked the conversations.

Bolivia and Paraguay have been rearming to the extent of their financial power, although they were forbidden to do so under the armistice protocol.

CLASS STRUGGLE: On the Detroit front the rapprochement (kiss-and-make-up) between Wall Street and the C. I. O. continues apace . . . When the auto union's bank account was tied up in a factional dispute, the union's pay roll was delayed while lawyers argued about who could sign checks . . . In this crisis a union official borrowed money from a Wall Street Journal reporter. He is wondering whether he is a traitor to his class.

About one-third of the members of Congress will be out investigating something this summer, amid all the campaigning—monopoly, TVA, Nazis, profit sharing and the like. One of my favorite Congressmen, who will be investigating merchant marine and fisheries, is torn between investigating 'em in Panama or Alaska. When it gets hot he thinks Alaska will win, though his wife thinks it's Panama's fish and ships that need scrutiny.

Sen. La Follette . . . enchanted?

In spite of the scurrilous rumor that Franklin Roosevelt, jr., likes to spend many an evening away from his law books—some of them night-clubbing in New York, 300 miles away from Charlottesville—the young man placed second in his class in the law exams just finished at the University of Virginia.

He made a mark of 96, which is darned near good enough to qualify him as a rugged individualist.

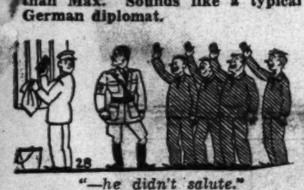
If the Vaterland ever wants a successor to Max Schmeling, I'll tip Herr Hitler where to look: in the German Embassy here in Washington, where blond, handsome Heinrich Johannesen packs a right that's a lulu . . . His boxing instructor, Maj. Ed Dyer, tells me young Heinrich is bigger and hits harder than Max. Sounds like a typical German diplomat.



"—he didn't salute."

G-man Edgar Hoover himself may urge Congress next session to make it illegal for anyone to pay ransom to a kidnapper . . . He may suggest an amendment to the Lindbergh law making the payment of ransom a crime—which would knock the bottom out of the kidnap. The records show now that the chances of redeeming a captive alive are better if no ransom is paid.

Anti-Nazi Germans in Washington are telling this one on Hitler:

Der Fuehrer went to visit a new model lunatic asylum, where the patients had been coached to give him the stiff-arm salute. But one old chap didn't salute; just kept polishing a doorknob.

"Why don't you salute?" demanded Herr Adolf fiercely.

"I'm not crazy," said the guard. "I just work here."

Recently, when Senator Bob La Follette showed signs of drifting away from the New Deal, it was Betsy Roosevelt who slung an elegant dinner party for him, at which he and Mrs. La Follette, to their surprise, found themselves guests of honor . . . Betsy turned on all her charm—and when she does that, as the French say, oohla-la! . . . There are several Senators who could be more easily salvaged by such tactics.

"—he gave 'em scientific time."

Some patriots feel that a government scientific bureau can give them the exact time at any hour of day or night . . . At the Bureau of Standards the night watchman, when so annoyed around 2 a. m., solemnly gave them the correct time from a battered old 95-cent alarm clock he kept in his cubbyhole . . . Until recently, that is, when a new electrical clock was installed.

THIRD TERM STRAWS: Some of the White House inner circle are willing to bet 3 to 1 that FDR won't be a candidate for a third term. He'd like to relax a little on his acres; and he is a stouter American traditionalist, they point out, than most of his critics.

Group Will Buy Wilson's Home, Set Up Shrine

Fund Is Raised to Acquire War-Time President's Birthplace.

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 27.—Judge D. Lawrence Groner, of Washington, attorney for the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation, Inc., said today The Manse, birthplace of the former President at Staunton, would be purchased by the foundation for $25,000.

The foundation, which filed its charter with the State corporation commission today, plans to make Wilson's birthplace a national shrine.

The organization is headed by Mrs. Cordell Hull, president, and Virginia's two Senators, Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd, vice presidents.

Judge Groner said virtually the entire sum had been raised and that the transfer would be completed within two weeks. The national shrine, the foundation said, will be "dedicated to the aims and ideals and purpose for which Woodrow Wilson lived and died—that men of every nation and all times might have a fairer opportunity to enjoy the fruits of democracy and thus be the better enabled to attain the mental, moral and spiritual development intended for them by their Divine Creator."

The State of Virginia has appropriated $10,000 for the purpose of aiding in the purchase and maintenance of the property. Of this amount, $5,000 will be available July 1 and will be used as part of the purchase money, Judge Groner said.

The remaining $5,000 will be available July 1, 1939. Restoration of the building is expected to cost that amount.

D.C. Endeavor Unit Plans Conference

Plans for the annual District Senior Christian Endeavor Conference at Fredericksburg were decribed last night at Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church by Miss Beryl Wooding, president of the local union, principal speaker at the rally, which was attended by 200.

Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. James King, of Arlington, Va., will speak at the conference, which will be held on the campus of the State Teachers' College from July 1-4. Over 200 delegates have registered to date.

Act Authorizes Work At U. S. Naval Academy

President Roosevelt yesterday signed an act authorizing an immediate start on a $4,000,000 construction program for naval stations.

Police Hunt Voice That Robbed Man Of $1,008 in Cash

Samuel C. Henschel, 34, 809 Kennedy street northwest, employe of Brooks, Inc., a women's clothing concern, was robbed of $1,008 on F street northwest shortly after noon yesterday, he told police.

Henschel, a window trimmer, was bound for the Columbia Bank, 900 block of F street northwest, with receipts from the store when, he said, a voice behind him ordered him into a doorway at 927 F street northwest.

A satchel containing the money was taken from his hand and he was told to mount the stairs going to the second floor of the F street address, Henschel told Detective Lieut. John H. Fowler.

When he returned to the street after a few minutes, Henschel said he found the money bag in the doorway with the $1,008 gone.

Police Bullet Ends 83-Mile-an-Hour Chase of Speeder

An 85-mile-an-hour auto chase over slippery roads ended last night when Maryland State Police fired a shot into the rear of a car containing five colored youths. Two police scout cars and the fleeing auto skidded and turned around three times in the 11-mile chase from Elkridge, Md., to Laurel.

Cartwright Greene, 20, of 1300 block of New Jersey avenue northwest, driver of the car, which was recently reported stolen here, was booked by the Maryland police on charges of exceeding 60 miles an hour, reckless driving and operating a stolen car. One boy told police he caught a ride in the car as it was leaving Baltimore and did not know the other youths.

According to police, Greene and his three other companions were released from the National Training School for Boys last spring.

The chase started when State troopers Charles Parker and Tom Johnson noticed the car speeding past Elkridge. The two troopers were joined by Sergt. Charles Durham, commander of the Waterloo sub-station.

Creek Killing Case Arrest Expected

Prince Frderick, Md., June 27.—State's Attorney Arthur W. Dowell said tonight he expected a chemical analysis of the vital organs of Mrs. Esther Lewis by Wednesday morning. The body of the Washington charwoman, who expected a baby in about five months, was found floating in Lyons Creek near here last Monday.

Meanwhile, police were still holding a middle-aged Arlington street-car conductor taken into custody Wednesday night. Although investigators have intimated repeatedly that a Washington physician might be drawn into the case, Dowell's statement yesterday that he believed "someone in Calvert County had something to do with the slaying," led observers to expect a local arrest soon.

Elks Will Play Host To Orphans Tomorrow

Some 2,000 Washington youngsters, inmates of local orphanages, will have a day of fun tomorrow when they go to Glen Echo Park on the annual outing given by the Elks' Club of the District.

With John Reh, chairman of the entertainment committee, acting as master of ceremonies, the children will enjoy a picnic lunch of ice cream and cake, watch a Punch and Judy show and explore the marvels of the amusement park. They will leave about 11 a. m. and return in the late afternoon, carried by special buses.

New Parking Bans Decreed On 19 Streets

Regulations, Effective in 10 Days, Pushed by Van Duzer.

Further parking restrictions on 19 Washington streets were ordered yestreday by the District Commissioners on the recommendation of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. The new orders will become effective within ten days.

In addition the commissioners ordered "every bicycle be equipped with a bell to be used as a warning of danger."

The complete list of restrictions follow:

On E street northwest, no parking at any time on the north side from Fifth street to the driveway into the Police Court Building (a distance of 90 feet.)

Parking Restricted.

G street northwest, from Fourteenth to Fifteenth street, on the north side, no parking, stopping or standing 8 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 to 6 p. m. This proposal originated with the Public Utilities Commission.

Jackson place, no parking from 8 to 9:30 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m. one hour parking from 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. It was explained that there is no parking on this street between the two specified periods but there is need for a limitation of parking during the day on account of the fact there is a good deal of business transacted in this area.

The Mall, between Washington and Adams drive, no parking at any time on Third, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. This proposal originated with the National Park Service and the authorities of the U. S. Capitol in order that there may be maintained an open vista from the Capitol to the Washington Monument. This situation is now covered by official signs.

Rules Listed.

North Capitol street, between Massachusetts avenue and G street, no parking on the east side from 4 to 6 p. m., 30-minute parking 7 a. m. to 4 p. m., and on the west side no parking 7 to 9:30 a. m., 30-minute parking 9:30 a. m. to 6 p. m.

North Capitol street, between G and M streets, west side, no parking 7 to 9:30 a. m., one hour parking 9:30 a. m. to 6 p. m., and on the east side no parking 4 to 6 p. m., one hour parking 7 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Park road, from the north building line of 2065 Piney Branch Bridge on the east side and from Pierce Mill road to Piney Bridge on the west side, no parking at any time. This has been in effect for some time by the use of official signs.

Pennsylvania avenue northwest, from Twenty-sixth to L streets, no parking on the south side between 8 a. m. and 12 noon.

Pierce Mill road, from Park road west to the end of the road, no parking on the north side at any time.

R street, between Seventh street and Connecticut avenue, no parking on the south side at any time.

Wisconsin avenue, from Newark to Macomb streets, on the west side, one-hour parking from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Twelft street northwest, from Pennsylvania avenue to E street and from F street south a distance of 100 feet on the east side, no parking at any time.

Twelfth street, from F street to Rhode Island avenue, no parking on the east side from 4 to 6 p. m.

Twenty-sixth street northwest, from M street to Pennsylvania avenue, no parking on the west side at any time.

Eastern avenue northeast, from Walnut street to Laurel avenue, no parking on the east side at any time.

M street northeast, from First to Third street, no parking on the south side at any time.

Todd place northeast, from North Capitol street to Second street, no parking on the south side at any time.

West Virginia avenue northeast, from K street to Mount Olivet road, no parking on the west side at any time.

First street northeast, from Massachusetts avenue, north to the first subway entrance into Union Station, on the east side, no parking at any time.

Third street northeast, from M street south to the south end of the gas station on the west side, a distance of 486 feet, no parking at any time.

Twelfth street northeast, from Monroe to Newton street, 1-hour parking from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Vehicles will be prohibited from making either a right or left hand turn at Thirteenth and F streets northwest, between 7 a. m. and midnight. The same applies to Twelfth and F streets northwest. Heretofore the regulations prohibited these turns at Thirteenth street between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Van Duzer said there is a large amount of traffic at these points, including pedestrians, until 12 midnight, and the regulation affecting turns should be in effect at the same time that the lights are in operation.

Six streets were designated for one-way vehicular traffic. These are:

Portner place, from U to V streets for northbound traffic only.

Powhatan place, between Fifth and Seventh streets, for eastbound traffic only.

Hobart place, from Sherman avenue to Fifth street, for eastbound traffic only.

Twelfth street northwest, from Constitution avenue to Florida avenue, for northbound traffic only between 4 and 6 p. m., except on Sundays.

Eleventh street northeast, from B street northeast to East Capitol avenue (south side of Lincoln Square), for southbound traffic only.

Police to Hear Rules Daily on Use of Revolvers

Alcohol Tax Officials Say Gun Was Discharged Accidentally.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—Two men who said they were agents of the Kansas City division of the Federal alcohol tax unit were arranging $2,000 bond each tonight after their arrest on assault with intent to murder charges resulting from the shooting of a Washington, D. C., cafe operator.

The men, described by Capt. Frank Glisson of the police homicide bureau as Leonard Hill, 44, and Gus S. Gehlbach, 51, were ordered held for grand jury action after arraignment before Magistrate Tom Phillips. They pleaded innocence.

Capt. Glisson said S. E. Wakeham, of Washington, was shot in the thigh after the two officers chased his automobile from a Mississippi River Bridge.

Glisson quoted Hill as saying the shooting was accidental.

"My partner and I were sent to Memphis to try to stop the bringing of whisky into Tennessee and Mississippi," Hill said.

"The Wakeman car attracted our attention. We followed it to a filling station after an argument with one of the men. When he got out, I got out of my car with my gun in my hand. The gun discharged accidentally, striking the young man in the leg."

The city directory lists an E. Edward Wakeham as living at 1915 K street northwest. No one answered at that address last night.

New Mental Law Hearings for 14

The new system of handling insanity cases got under way formally today when the Commission on Mental Health held its first session at Gallinger Hospital. Fourteen men and women appeared before the commission in private sessions in contrast to the open jury trials that prevailed until the enactment of the lunacy law. Thomas Gillespie Walsh, former assistant corporation counsel and now chairman of the commission, and Drs. H. D. Shapiro and Albert Marland heard the first cases.

Sentence of Landis To Be Imposed Today

Sentence will be imposed this morning on James L. Landis in United States District Court for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Blanche Landis, by Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

Under the second-degree verdict, the court may impose a sentence of from 20 years' imprisonment to life. Counsel for Landis already have stated they will not seek an appeal.

Girl Honor Graduate, Missing 2 Days, Home

Missing since last Tuesday, a former honor graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School was returned to her parents last night when the 17-year-old girl had friends call her family to inform them of her safety.

The girl, Barbara Rudolph, 3700 Jenifer street northwest, told police she had stayed at the home of friends since her disappearance because she "wanted to get a job and be on my own."

U. S. Fascists Sending Arms Against Mexico, Unionist Says

Americans in Southern California Co-operating With Nazi and Italian Agents, Labor Leader Tells 800 Here.

American Fascists in Southern California, acting in close co-operation with German, Italian and Japanese agents, are sending arms and propaganda across the border to undermine Mexican democracy, it was charged last night by Vincente Lombardo Toledano, Mexican labor leader.

The reference to a Fascist base in the United States climaxed a long and circumstantial account of anti-democratic activity in Latin-America heard by an audience of 800 in the Press Club auditorium.

Mexico is the focal point of assault on North and South American democracy, Toledano asserted, because of its proximity to the United States, its vigorous championship of liberal institutions, wherever threatened, and its domestic program for social and economic justice. In Fascist eyes, "Mexico sets a bad example to the rest of Latin-America," he observed.

Chamberlain Hissed.

Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain was hissed twice, first when Toledano mentioned his name while Speaking in Spanish, and again and more loudly when his interpreter, Alejandro Carillo, translated the statement:

"Chamberlain's Spanish policy shows him to be a real ally of fascism, not a believer in democracy. We must have active, fighting democracies, not passive democracies."

Speaking from the same platform, John Brophy, executive director of the C. I. O., claimed that Henry Ford and Tom Girdler "are looking for an American Hitler to front for them in their war on organized labor."

"Unless we are watchful," he warned, "they will find one. Unless we continue in the front rank of the struggle to maintain and extend democracy, we will undergo the same experience that our brother workers are suffering now in Germany and Italy.

"Premier Duplessis of Quebec has the applause of every reactionary, open and secret, in the United States when he padlocks union halls and expresses union rights to organize or to strike," Brophy said. "The air was full of praise for Canada's little fuehrer, Premier Hepburn of Ontario, when he tried to stop the C. I. O. in his province.'

"Anti-democratic forces attack labor first. Behind every Fascist and would-be Fascist is the figure of the antilabor employer or corporation that stands to profit directly by an attack on labor organizations."

Every advance made by Mexican workers is an advance for American workers, Brophy said. 'We can build a stronger progressive movement here if our fellow workers in Mexico—and in other countries—are organized, too, if they are able to defend their standards of living and working."

Toledano, who is secretary-general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, declared that American and Mexican workers are faced with "an urgent common task if we are to oppose the possibilities of savage fascist aggression."

The United States and certain Latin-American nations are specific objectives of fascist penetration, he said, because the existence of democracy here threatens undemocratic regimes elsewhere. "Fascism must impose its system on other lands to stay in power in its own countries."

"German economic royalists barter manufactured goods for badly needed raw materials of Latin America," he said, "eliminating much of the commerce of these countries with the democratic nations."

Fascist Incidents Cited.

As instances of recent fascist activity in South and Central America Toledano cited:

A concession given by the Columbian government to a German concern, granting full rights to explore for oil in an area of 88,000 square kilometers, and a similar contract with the authorities in Ecuador.

German iron, oil and copper interests in Brazil, extension of German air service to the most remote regions of that country and control of 39 airports.

Presence of Germans on the staff of the Peruvian army and instruction of the Lima (Peru) police force by Italian officers.

A sharp increase in Japanese espionage throughout Latin America, keeping pace with economic penetration.

Mechanization and reorganization of the army of Guatemala, immediately south of Mexico, by German officers.

"Guatemala is preparing itself to play the role of Portugal in the Spanish civil war," he charged, "if a critical moment arrives for Mexican democracy."

$10,000 Is Sought For 1938 Regatta

A drive for $10,000 to underwrite the President's Cup Regatta for 1938 will be launched today under the direction of C. Melvin Sharpe, assistant to the general chairman, James A. Councilor.

Contributors will receive special discounts on tickets to regatta events next September and will be entitled to a "liquidating dividend to be distributed pro rata from any receipts over disbursements for the year's operations," Sharpe explained.

Teams of members of the Fo'csle Club and the President's Cup Regatta Association will solicit subscriptions.

Klan Funeral Set For Mrs. C. C. Smith

Funeral services with Ku Klux Klan rites will be held at Chambers undertaking establishment, 517 Eleventh street southeast at 2 p. m. today for Mrs. Christina C. Smith, of 410 Fifteenth street northeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith also a member of the Daughters of America and the order of Eastern Star, will lie in state at the undertaking establishment until the funeral. She will be clad in the white satin robe of the Klan, with the American flag and the Klan flag at either end of the casket.

Stuart's Cavalry Rode North 75 Years Ago; Error Recalled

Maryland Towns Mark Anniversary of Progress of Union and Confederate Forces Along Routes to Gettysburg.

By the Associated Press.

Rockville, Md., June 27.—The events which led to Gettysburg 75 years ago left their trail across Maryland and almost every day brings an anniversary of an episode in the progress of Northern and Southern forces to the battlefield.

Seventy-five years ago today the bulk of the Southern cavalry was crossing into Maryland at Rowsers Ford in the Potomac, southwest of here and near Dranesville in Virginia.

Stuart again was making one of his famous rides around the Northern army, but this time his absence from the rest of the army, already in Pennsylvania, was to have dangerous consequences for the South. He crossed the river, in obedience to orders, east of Harpers Ferry—but his orders did not say how far east. He was between the Northern army, encamped near Frederick, and Washington.

His first act in Maryland was to capture and burn a train of 125 Federal wagons here. This alarmed Northern generals, but not enough to turn them from their cautious maneuvering after Lee.

Stuart's men rode up the little rise at the east end of the Main street here and fell on the wagoneers. Those that could, fled. The rest were captured and paroled.

As Stuart swept on his headquarters were, successively, at Sykesville, Westminster, Union Mills and Hanover, Pa. Finally, just before the battle whose anniversary will be celebrated Sunday, he completed his circuit and rode down from the North to join Lee.

But, meanwhile, Lee was blinded by the absence of his cavalry. He did not know how many Federals were nearing him, nor where they were. By the time he learned, Gettysburg was upon him.

GermansHereWent 32 Miles for Every Second of Fight

New Yorkers who thought the Louis-Schmeling affair wasn't really worth the trip to Yankee Stadium ought to talk to 30 Germans, now in Washington for a day, who travelled 32 miles for every second of the fight.

"It was all a great disappointment, of course," said a Berlin business man in the party. "We were confident Maxie would win."

When asked whether Schmeling would still be a hero in his native land, the Germans shrugged their shoulders.

"I'm sorry to say it," one volunteered, "but Louis was a better fighter. He seemed confident, and Schmeling was rather listless."

One Teutonic boxing enthusiast, who has seen Schmeling in all his major European fights, explained that the German slugger is a slow starter. "I expected to see an active Schmeling really begin the fight in the fifth or sixth round," he said.

Police to Hear Pistol Rules Recited Daily

Hazen Promises He'll Investigate Charges of 'Brutality.'

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen took three steps to meet the charges of brutality and "unwarranted killing" by members of the Metropolitan Police Department after a meeting yesterday of every high-ranking official of the department.

The steps were:

A promise that the Leroy Keys case will be reopened should a review of testimony of the fatal shooting by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal warrant this action.

A promise to investigate thoroughly the fatal shooting of Wallace McKnight, 33-year-old colored night watchman at 1703 K street northwest, by a rookie policeman, John E. Sobolewski.

An order to all precinct captains to read daily at roll call from the manual of the Metropolitan Police Department the rules governing the use of revolvers.

Protests "Brutality."

These developments resulted from a meeting last week between members of the Race Relations Committee of the Washington Federation of Churches and the Commissioners. At this time Dr. R. W. Brooke, colored-chairman of the committee, protested against the "brutal treatment of police afforded members of the colored people" and the "unwarranted killings" by the police.

Leroy Keys died of bullet wounds from the service revolver of John Nally, of the Tenth Precinct. Nally was freed by the grand jury.

Hazen said he had instructed Corporation Counsel Seal to make a thorough investigation of the testimony at the coroner's proceedings and also that of the grand jury and to decide whether Nally should be held for the Trial Board and possible criminal proceedings.

Rule is Manual.

The Police Manual states: "Members of the force shall not use their revolvers except in the most urgent cases, and then only in such a manner as will not jeopardize the lives of innocent people."

Hazen instructed the 24 captains to read these rules to the police every day at roll call and to urge "courtesy" to their men.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown said he had ordered Sobolewski suspended held for the coroner.

Present at the meeting yesterday were Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson, Assistant Chief of Detectives Ira Keck, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and 24 captains of the Metropolitan Police.

Meanwhile Commissioner Hazen has been invited by the District branch of the Communist Party to explain his policy toward "police brutality" at a meeting at 7 p. m. tomorrow at 1529 Vermont avenue northwest.

Connecticut Rites For Mrs. Vance, 75

Requiem mass for Mrs. Mathilda O'Connor Vance, 75, sister of George H. O'Connor, prominent Washington attorney, was sung yesterday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in New Britain, Conn. Mrs. Vance died Saturday at her residence in New Britain.

Mrs. Vance was president and treasurer of the corporation which publishes the New Britain Herald for more than 25 years. Her husband, the late Representative Johnstone Vance, was one of the founders of the paper.

Besides Mr. O'Connor, she is survived by two other brothers, Dr. Charles E. O'Connor and Kenneth O'Connor, both of this city, and a daughter, Mrs. Agnes Vance Weld, who is secretary of the organization which Mrs. Vance headed.

Shirley Temple Inducts Hoover Into Variety Life Membership

Visiting Screen Star Shares Honors With FBI Chief at Willard Luncheon; 'Crime School' Is Back; Windjammers Tonight; Notes of Theater.

HAVING reached the age of retentive memory, Miss Shirley Temple, one suspects, always will remember her first visit to the National Capital as marking the week of greatest activity in her busy young life.

Having arrived in Washington last Thursday night, after an arduous day of motoring from Akron, Ohio, the golden-haired little trouper has been on the move practically ever since. Her week-end, as everyone knows by now, was dedicated to visits with the President, two meetings with the press, a tour through the Federal Bureau of Investigation, under the personal guidance of J. Edgar Hoover; sightseeing and—of all things!—a not so surreptitious peek at her next starring vehicle, "Little Miss Broadway," which was crowded in for a "sneak preview" on F street last Saturday night.

BELL.

I say "not so very surreptitious" because, while Mr. and Mrs. Temple and their party were able to spirit Shirley into the Capitol Theater practically unnoticed, getting the diminutive and dimpled star out again with equal secrecy was to all intents and purposes impossible. By the time the picture was over, the whole town knew she was there—and she knew the whole town was there!

Yesterday was another big day. With a full schedule already planned, Shirley and her parents found time to drop in at the Variety Club luncheon, in the main ballroom of the Willard, honoring J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the F. B. I., with an honorary life membership in all the Variety Clubs in America.

It was the smiling and composed Miss Temple who made the preliminary presentation of the symbol of his membership to Mr. Hoover. Standing on a chair on the speakers' dais, the biggest little star the cinema ever has known said in effect: "I am very happy to be here in Washington and to present Mr. Hoover with this token on this happy occasion." She never made a speech on the screen that was greeted with such a cyclone of applause Neither has she ever made a speech from the screen with more complete self-possession or more obvious enjoyment. She left to resume her dizzy round immediately afterward.

Today this prodigious youngster will be the honor guest at dinner at which Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Mrs. Morgenthau will be hosts. Many other important appointments also remain to be kept before Shirley and Mr. and Mrs. Temple resume their leisurely "vacation" tour of these United States.

I still feel that Shirley will remember Washington as the place where she was kept most continuously and most pleasantly busy.

The Variety Club luncheon was an occasion of some note, over and above the brief presence of the screen's foremost star. It was his gold membership card that Shirley presented to J. Edgar Hoover. At the conclusion of the luncheon, Chief Barker A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington Tent, No. 11, of Variety—pinch-hitting as "king for the day"—presented the more pretentious emblem signalizing Mr. Hoover's induction into life membership in the national organization. This took the form of a large, engraved silver plaque, mounted on ebony, suitably inscribed to its recipient.

In response, the director of the F. B. I., paid high tribute to Variety, with emphasis on the charitable activities of the Washington tent, as a civic organization that plays an active and a definite part in serving the underprivileged and thus does its share in preventing crime at its source. In the course of his fluent and interesting remarks Mr. Hoover revealed some vital and startling crime statistics, laying stress on the appalling percentage of American criminals who are under the age of 21, and disclosing, also, that there are four criminals in the United States for every school teacher. His talk was greeted by applause that rattled the windows of Barker Somerville's handsome hostelry.

The luncheon, incidentally, registered the largest attendance in the history of the club and was written down on the books as its most successful, both in number and distinction of those who almost overflowed the capacity of the large ballroom.

The Wilson Windjammers, directed by Forney Reese, will present Kenyon Nicholson's play of "The Barker" in the National Sylvan Theater tonight at 8 as the second of the season's Summer Festival bills. This will mark the first time this acting group ever has been seen in the rustic theater on the Monument Grounds. The play will be preceded by a half-hour concert of popular music by the Washington Elks Boys Band.

Buck Barbee, well-known Washington athlete turned Thespian, will appear in the title role of "The Barker," supported on the male side by Larry Lawrence, Frank Anderson, Robert Fain and John Guiffre. The feminine members of the cast will include Theresa Pekin, in the role of Garrie, the Hawaiian dancer; Valerie Turner, as Lou, the snake charmer; Nellie Sewall, as Ma, the fortune teller, and Jane Lawrence, as Cleo, a dancing girl.

In case of rain the performance will be postponed until tomorrow night.

"Crime School," the Warner Brothers' exciting film document aimed at the reformation of reformatories, returns to downtown Washington today as chief feature of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater, "Little Miss Thoroughbred" having departed the F street scene last night.

This is the film play in which the "Dead End" boys and Humphrey Bogart lay further claims to fame as the foremost contemporary exponents of hoodlumism, and its cure, on the screen. "Crime School" is almost as grim as "Dead End" and much funnier. All of the six lads who gained renown in the earlier picture are comedians as well as sterling actors of the "sock-'em-and-run school. Mr. Bogart for once is on the side of law and order—and of Gale Page, the "heart interest" in the film—which, of course, is entirely to his credit.

Following a recent wholesale transfer of theater managers, Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers' interests in Washington, yesterday announced promotions from the ranks of assistant and student managers attached to the local chain of Warner houses.

The shifts, which presumably take effect immediately, are as follows: Clyde Abell, from assistant manager of the Penn to the same post at the Earle; Raymond Burch, from student manager at the Ambassador to assistant manager at the Penn; Charles Burger, from student manager at the Avalon to student manager at the Ambassador, and Thomas Murray, from chief-of-service at the Calvert to student manager at Avalon.

So when you see those new faces, you'll know.

If we have time to go back to the Willard for a minute, I should like to report that that little black kitten that used to leap out from dark corners at most unexpected times, and so got her name in the paper, has assumed the heart-breaking responsibilities of full maturity, depression or no depression. She has just become the mother of a litter of kittens. And with what a litter is the Willard littered! Completely corroborating this column's contention that she was a very remarkable cat, "Blacky" now is the mother of nine—count 'em, nine—slightly nonplussed and stumbling offspring. Blacky, so I am told, seems just a little nonplussed herself. Accent probably on the "plus."

Manager Stephen E. Cochran has issued an invitation to theater-minded residents of Washington and Baltimore to visit his new summer theater, rapidly nearing completion near Olney, Md. Open house will be held throughout the week to enable visitors to see for themselves what is being done toward providing the "Twin Cities" with a unique place of hot-weather amusement. The theater now awaits only the installation of seats and a few interior finishing touches before opening its doors to the theatergoing public on Monday, July 11.

Mr. Mr. Cochran spent last week in New York selecting plays and contacting players for the first summer season of his new enterprise.

Speaking of animals, as we were a few block back, the National Theater now has a new mascot. That is, comparatively new. Manager Edmund Plohn, the sartorial ne plus ultra of E street, now is being led through the Capital's better thoroughfares by a perky little wire-haired terrier by the name of Jo-Jo. Jo-Jo takes the place of but does not wholly fill the void left by, Spooky, the skye terrier that made friends with everybody in show business while she was among us.

Glen Echo Park

Larry Funk and his "Band of a Thousand Melodies" began another week's engagement in the Spanish Garden ballroom in Glen Echo Park last night, announcement that will be well received by dancers, as Funk and his outfit have plenty of "umph."

Business was good for everything in the park over the week-end. The warm weather brought crowds to the Crystal Pool, where all thought of the mercury was quickly dispelled. News of the new "World Cruise" has spread far and wide, and there is always a long line waiting to take the "trip around the world" by means of its streamlined, six-passenger boats. Evidently there are plenty of water-minded folks around the town, because the fleet of new streamlined motorboats on the waterway canal were also putting out the S. R. O. sign.

It goes without saying that the crowd had no thought of leaving until they sampled the thrills on the big coaster dips, whip, pretzel, aeroplane swings and other smaller amusements.

Many picnic parties were observed in the groves, where the management had provided everything for their convenience.

Marshall Hall

A new note in outdoor entertainment was established last week by the management of Marshall Hall Park, when the new open-air theater was formally opened to the public. In modernistic dress and patterned from one of the stages built for the New York World's Fair, this unique structure is located in the spacious picnic grove.

The stage is equipped with a special lighting system and voice amplification. Shaded by restful oaks, elms and sycamores, an audience of 4,000 can comfortably enjoy stage presentations. Free shows are held on "Kiddies' Days" every Monday and Friday.

A special program has been arranged for Friday, July 1, under the direction of Anne Crystal. Approximately 100 dancers and vocalists will take part.

The Wilson liner City of Washington operates four trips daily to Marshall Hall Park, leaving Seventh street wharf at 10 a. m., 2, 5:30 and 8:30 p. m.

Shirley presented the chief G-man with his gold membership card and Chief Barker Brylawski with a silver plaque and life membership in all Variety clubs in America.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 27.—I don't suppose he cares, but if Sam Goldwyn isn't careful he's going to get himself disliked. We can all play that old game "On again, off again," but it's an expensive pastime, and doesn't do anybody any good.

HEDDA HOPPER

From Sam's remark — that he had just found out that Willie Wyler is a slow director —it would appear that Sam is a little slow in realizing it. Wyler did three pictures for him: "Dead End," starting those "Crime School" kids to fame—bet he wishes now he'd held on to them—and "These Three," one of Merle Oberon's best pictures. And Wyler took over "Come and Get It" after Howard Hawks had put in about six months on it.

Sam also took John Cromwell off "Marco Polo"—believe there's a lawsuit over that—after John had turned out "The Prisoner of Zenda," a right snappy opus, too. But it all goes back to that Mr. Shakespeare—a writer, too, who wrote, "The Play's the Thing." Meaning, no picture should be started until the story is completed. Would anyone begin building a skyscraper with plans only for the foundation? Or shouldn't I ask?

Did you know Merle Oberon is a philanthropist? After taxes here and in her own country are snipped out, she has 2 per cent for herself. She hoped to get her living expenses through radio. Sam gets half of that.

A pat on the back to Pan Berman who's given Walter Brown Rogers another ticket to fame. Rogers was injured in "All Quiet on the Western Front," and spent several years in and out of hospitals. Now he's in "Smashing the Rackets" for RKO. When Lew Landers, director of that picture, was a second assistant director, Kenneth Harlan, Henry Meyers, Wyndham Standing and Mary MacLaren—who were stars then—were mighty good to him. Now, Lew never makes a picture without them, Mary's grown into such a sweet understanding motherly type of woman and is buoyed up by being told that in a few years she'll have greater success than she ever had. Hope it comes true.

Now we have Paramount, with already a terrific investment, looking for another actress to replace Isa Miranda. They must have an exotic type. But Leslie Carter, who built up a fortune for herself and David Belasco in that part, was born in the Middle West. They could have had Carole Lombard—under contract to that studio, too—who does right well at the box office. But now she begins one for Selznick.

And then they chat about economy. Where? When? And how? Why don't we go back and adopt the policy which made this country great? Americans for America! The profit they've made from foreign stars is a drop in the bucket compared with our own. The foreigners are all right if they'll work. But we're so crazy about them we give them everything but the kitchen stove.

Sonja Henie is one, but how she works! And she is going to provide work for some of our people, too. In a few days she leaves for her home in Norway. While there she will book a tour of all the principle cities in Europe. Then she comes back to make "Castle In Norway," after which she'll make personal appearances in one night stands here. Then she will take 80 of our people—only one of whom has ever been abroad—skaters, dancers, hairdressers and make-up artists with her. I think that's swell!

"Always Good-by," with Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, proved again that if Marshall is given a good part he can go far. Cesar Romero did.

Strange, with all Darryl Zanuck's cleverness, he has never advanced the dramatic career of a great actress. This story shilly-shallies around, from good to bad, so quickly, it makes you dizzy. Winds up with no glory for Barbara Stanwyck. Not through any fault of hers, but because the character she plays is so untrue you don't know whether to kill her or forget her.

With so many writers crying for work, will one please come forth with a good story for Barbara Stanwyck?

The Roadside

What Mr. Christopher Morley's schauspielhaus was to Hoboken, what Mr. Krimsky's Music Hall is to Manhattan, the Roadside Theater is to Washington. Last evening the play was Tom Taylor's London success of 1853, "Plot and Passion," a title faintly foreshadowing the intrigues and counterplots involved in its action—action not to be missed.

The scene is the Paris of 1810—the Napoleonic Empire. Fouche, treacherous Minister of Police, whose background dates from the bloody Revolution, has the tragic young (and need one say beautiful?) widow, Mme. de Fontanges, under his wicked thumb (hiss-hiss) and she clings to him as a source of revenue for her gambling debts. His equally evil henchman, Desmarets, loves the lass. In the guise of a beneficent Abbe, the wily Fouche uncovers a royalist plot against the Emperor being hatched by a handsome young secretary of the foppish Marquis de Cevennes. But as his plot against the youth is about to culminate, Fouche's henchman performs a deft "double cross." The latter sends the young man off to safety on a plot of his own. The unfortunate Mme de Fontanges is sent to Prague to lure the royalist back into the fiendish net. On the Danube, however, love comes to our brave little gambler and "papers" galore, trick canes, sliding panels and all the accoutrements of melodrama follow each other in almost bewildernig succession.

Without a doubt "Plot and Passion" is right up the Roadsiders cow-path and it is only to be regretted that last evening's storm prevented all but the staunchest regulars from filling the old red barn on the Rockville pike.

To this reviewer the only fault to find was in the playing of the second act which might have been speeded up considerably. Surely the most effective sets by Mr. Pearson and the elegant costumes designed by Miss Croissant lend rich atmosphere to the production.

Betty Gray, as the unfortunate Mme. de Fontanges, was a person perpetual of charm to the audience. As Desmarets, Ralph Fowler offered a masterpiece of make-up with a sharp beak and scrawny head of hair. Paul Messink could not have been improved upon as the dreadful Fouche in his habit of the Abbe. George Farrington, as the foppish Marquis gained his laughs easily and Richard Kreuzburg was an acceptable hero. Pryor McFadden at Grisboulle, another espionage artist, laid 'em in the aisles with his monosylabbic grunts in the guise of a German servant. Anne Moran as Cecile, the unhappy maid, also won the house with her comedy.

Weight Change.

Although Spencer Tracy wears only one outfit in "Boys Town" that of a priest, the wardrobe department at the studio was forced to call him in for special fittings. The winner of the Academy Award in 1937 has lost 15 pounds since completion of "Test Pilot," necessitating complete change of measurements.

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JUNE 28, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 27.—Being a fairly accurate description of how the Washington ball players greeted the American League's All-star game selections:

"Hey, lookit this, willya? They put three first basemen on the club.

POVICH

"Well, that's all right. Foxx has gotta be in there and they can use Trosky and Greenberg for pinch hitting."

"Don't see Trosky's name here in the line-up."

"Thought you said they had three first basemen."

"That's what it says here. Wait a minute. Here they are: Foxx, Greenberg and Gehrig."

"Gehrig?" They can't do that."

"Well, they did it."

"The only thing I can say then, is that this All-Star game is getting to be a joke. That big bum doesn't rate being on the All-Star team this year any more than my wife does."

"Yeah, that's what I say. It's a crime, leaving Trosky off and putting Gehrig in there."

"What's Gehrig hitting, about .275, ain't he?"

"Yeah, and lookit Trosky—.363. Been leading the league most of the year and still he can't make the team. He's never had a shot at it and this looked like his year."

* * * *

"That's a crime all right. The ball players are getting fed up on this all-star business. No kidding. It ain't how good you are that counts, but who your are. They're putting Gehrig on the team just because he used to be a big shot in the league."

"It's all right with me if I never play in one of those all-star games. Those three days off look pretty good to me. And half the boys who go to Cincinnati will be sitting on the bench anyway."

"Did I tell you what happened to me in 1935? It was another of those Gehrig cases. I had been in every one of those all-star games, too. But that year I was terrible. Only hitting .250. I never thought I had a chance to get into that all-star game. It was in Cleveland that year. But darned if my name wasn't on the list.

"Don't remind me of that one. I went all the way out there and sat on the bench for nine innings.

"Let me finish what I started to say. I didn't ever think I'd get to play in that 1935 game so I wrote Harridge telling him a lot of guys who hadn't been in it deserved a chance and would he let me drop out. But he wouldn't

* * * *

"How many all-star games does this make for you, Rick?"

"Six. I've been in all of 'em. That's the only reason I'm glad I made it again. After all, there's some honor in that. But they haven't started me since the first All-Star game in Chicago in 1933. I caught all of that one. Been on the bench ever since.

"You oughta heard Greenberg cuss last year. They brought him all the way from Detroit to Washington and when the game started he didn't get his nose out of the dugout.

Joe McCarthy, or whoever it was that finally picked the American League team this year, ought to have his head examined. Three first basemen and only five outfielders. That's what a club needs—outfielders, fellows who they can switch around against different kinds of pitching.

"How does Gomez rate it, with only four wins and eight losses this year?

"Yeah, but he's been losing the tough ones. There may be guys in this league with better records than Gomez, but they ain't as good pitchers. Gomez can pitch for my club any time. Look at Newsom and Kennedy. They made it. But who would you rather have out there pitching for you—those two guys or Gomez?"

* * * *

"I guess they'll start Red Rolfe at third and Cronin at short and keep Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis on the bench."

"Yeah, McCarthy thinks Rolfe is the only guy who can play third base in this league. He's McCarthy's pet. And he'll start Cronin ahead of Travis because Cronin is a manager. But just the same I'll bet McCarthy would jump at the chance to trade Rolfe for Lewis even up."

"I'd like to see Buck Newsom get a chance to work in that game.

"Newsom's on the squad, but they'd be crazy to let him pitch."

"I don't know about that. That big galoot might surprise 'em. He'd be right in his glory in an All-Star uniform. And if he knew he only had to go three innings. He'd be powdering that ball in there. He can be awful tough when he's showing off like that. I wouldn't be afraid to take a chance on him."

"Well, all I say is, it's a heluva note to put Gehrig back on the team. He doesn't rate this year and he knows he's lucky to be on it. But how they can select him and leave Trosky off is beyond me. That's a joke.

Weill Asks Delay Of Title Fight

New York, June 27 (AP).—Al Weill, manager of lightweight champion Lou Ambers, said today he would ask the New York State Athletic Commission tomorrow to sanction a postponement of one week of Ambers' 135-pound title fight with Henry Armstrong, fetaherweight and welterweight champion, scheduled for July 26 in New York.

Promoter Mike Jacobs said that if the commission approved he would stage the show August 2, either in the Yankee Stadium or in the Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City.

Budge Wins In England Net Tourney

Gains Quarter-Finals by Great Play; Three U. S. Women Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 27.—Don Budge marched majestically into the semifinals of the All-England tennis championships today as Helen Jacobs, Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan joined Helen Wills Moody to battle for the United States in the quarter-finals of the women's competition.

Utterly irresistible, Budge thrashed the handsome, blond Czechoslovakian, F. Cejnar, 6—3, 6—0, 7—5. Although Cejnar looked like a really good and well equipped player, he was in danger of his life most of the time as the California red head sent his cannonball service booming over the net and dusted the baselines with his powerful drives.

Budge started by breaking Cejnar's racquet with his first service and then went to the net to win the first set after the Czech had showed signs of putting up a fight. It took the American only 9 minutes to run out the second set and he took the third after the first ten games had gone with service.

MacPhail Defeated.

Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, also gained the round of four by defeating Don MacPhail, of England, 6—2, 6—1, 6—1, but all he earned for his efforts was a chance to meet Budge—a none too pleasant task the way Don is going now. England's H. W. (Bunny) Austin and Henner Henkel, of Germany, filled the other brackets. Austin whipped Max Ellmer, of Switzerland, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2, and Henkel turned back Ladislaus Hecht, of Czechoslovakia, 7—5, 6—1, 6—2.

However, it remained for Miss Jacobs to rebuke in public the opinion of the Lawn Tennis Association officials, who decided before the tournament started that the 1936 champion was not good enough to be seeded. She has been in the finals here five out of the last nine times, yet they seeded Peggy Scriven, of England, eighth. Helen personally took care of Peggy on the center court to the tune of 7—5, 6—4.

Completely recovered from the recent collapse and using her new forehand with devastating effect, Helen outfought Peggy in the first set and outclassed her in the second to gain a position as the real dark horse of the tournament.

Dorothy Bundy Bows.

Just as Miss Jacobs furnished the day's excitement in the women's singles, Mrs. Fabyan and Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., furnished the fun. From the start to the finish it was a squealing match, with Dorothy piping good naturedly and tossing her racquet in the air when long hard-hitting rallies ended. Mrs. Fabyan finally won, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

For a time it looked like the second upset of the day for in the first set, Miss Bundy had the hardest drives and the best angles to her shots. She trailed 1-3 and then won five in a row to take the first set. The daughter of Sutton Bundy insisted, however, on getting in the same hole at the start of the next two sets and this time agile little Mrs. Fabyan didn't let her get away with it.

Miss Marble had trouble with her service at the start but she finally got used to the sticky turf and eliminated Ruth Mary Hardwick, of England, 7—5, 6—4. The former American champion reverted to drop shots to come from behind in the first set and then poured over her service in the second after again getting away to a slow start.

The quarter-final round tomorrow will send Miss Marble against Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France. Miss Jacobs will meet Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Poland's defending champion while Mrs. Fabyan will tangle with Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling of Denmark. Mrs. Moody, who was a round ahead of the field and did not play today, will match strokes with the English southpaw, Kay Stammers.

Mulloy Advances, Scores Net Upset

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., upset Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, national indoor champion ranked ninth nationally, by scores of 6—2, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1 today as quarter-final play in the national clay courts tennis tournament resumed after a three-day layoff caused by rain.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, the defending champion, also advanced to the semifinals, defeating Horald Surface, of Kansas City, 6—3, 6—4, 9—7.

Tribe Wins 7 to 3; Feller Gives 7 Hits

Bosox Bow as Leaders Pound Out 15 Hits; Foxx Hits Homer.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 27.—The Indians backed up Bobby Feller's classy seven-hit pitching today with a 15-hit attack of their own to trounce the Boston Red Sox 7 to 3 and boost their American League lead to four full games.

Feller, gaining his ninth victory against two defeats for the year, bested the veteran Lefty Grove, who was handed his third setback of the season.

Young Bobby got himself into several tight spots, but pulled out of all of them. He was particularly cool in the third, when the Sox loaded the bases on two singles and a walk, with none out, and then Feller fanned Pinky Higgins and forced Ben Chapman to ground into a double play to end the threat.

Again in the fifth it looked bad, when Jimmy Foxx clouted his twenty-first homer of the year and Joe Cronin followed with a two-bagger, but again Bobby struck out Higgins to pull through. Altogether, he fanned ten Boston batters.

His mates, meantime, didn't leave the issue long in doubt. After the Sox got away to a one-run lead in the first inning, the Tribe landed on Lefty for two runs in the third, and they were never behind after that.

His chief aids in downing the Sox were Rollicking Rollie Hemsley, who treated himself to three singles and a double; Bruce Campbell, who had a double and a pair of singles, and Hal Trosky, whose tenth homer of the year brought in two runs in the seventh.

Managers Near Fist Battle as Furr Avoids Weighing for Bout Tonight

Abrams Scales 154½, But Dundee Refuses to Let Phil Weigh.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

While storm clouds loitered overhead and bitter words passed back between the rival managers, Phil Furr's bout with George Abrams for the city middleweight championship, scheduled last night, was postponed until tonight because of threatening weather.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn took a couple of sniffs of fresh air, detected a faint odor of moisture and hastily called the Weather Bureau. Heine Miller, secretary of the ring commission; the U. S. Naval Observatory, Promoter Joe Turner and all five newspapers. The straw vote favored a postponement and Ahearn took out papers for the same.

Abrams, meanwhile, had stripped down to his natal day suit and stepped on the commission scales. Inspector Willie Blake jiggled the indictaor until it hovered over 154½ pounds. The audience of newspapermen, commission officials and two noncombatants gasped in astonishment at the low figure, for only last Monday the lad had trouble making 158¾ pounds.

Inspector Harry Martin called Furr to the front, but his manager, Chris Dundee, came forward instead.

"I understand this fight's been postponed until tomorrow," he said, "and in that event we'll weigh in tomorrow. And we want him (pointing to Abrams) to weigh again."

A stray stick poked into a beehive couldn't possibly have produced more excitement. Ahearn gulped a couple of times and almost fell down. Fishel almost swallowed his cigar stub. Abrams merely stood and stared. They looked at Dundee as if he were a ghost. Then came the deluge.

Fischel Throws Harsh Words at Rival Pilot; Fisticuffs Averted.

"I won't do it," bellowed Fishel, advancing toward Dundee in a threatening manner. "I won't do it. We made weight last week, and now we make weight today. I won't let my boy weigh in again. He's been on them scales once and he's not getting on again."

Dundee shrugged his shoulders. "I'm only going by the terms of the contract," he said, tapping his copy of that document with a finger. "It says here they must weigh in on the date of the fight. If we fight tomorrow that's the date we weigh in."

"Wait a minute," interrupted Heine Miller, commission secretary. "Wait a minute, Chris. We have a

Chisox Beat Browns, 9-4

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 27.—The St. Louis Browns slipped further into the American League cellar today, bowing to the seventh-place Chicago White Sox, 9 to 4, in the first of a four-game series.

The Browns continued to be impotent at the plate. Veteran Ted Lyons allowed them only six hits until the eighth inning and then eased up as his mates had built up a comfortable lead.

Harlond Clift lifted his eighth home run of the season into the stands in the first inning. Hank Steinbacher got a four-bagger inside the park in the seventh.

Five Yachts in Race To Bermuda Still Out

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 27 (AP). Only five yachts in the Newport-Bermuda race remained to be accounted for as six more checked in during the night and early morning hours.

None of the six had a chance to carry off any part of the prize money. All were entered in class B, they were: Cherry Blossom, owned by Roger Robinson, New York; Golden Eye, H. Prescott Wells, Jersey City; Kirawan 2d, R. P. Baruch, New York; Souvenir, John J. White, Atlantic City; Sirocco, Paul Sperry, New Haven, and Blue Wing, Milton J. Blair, New York.

Pro Gridmen Sign for '38

The postman punched the Redskins' front doorbell a couple of times yesterday and the club's contract worries for 1938 diminished proportionately, for he left General Manager Jack Espey the signed contracts of two huskies. The boys who signed are Erny Pinckert, blocking back, and Jim Barber, tackle.

A strapping gentleman with 200 pounds of castiron muscle draped over a 6-foot 1-inch frame, Pinckert has been with the club since its organization seven years ago. Last season he was a power on the offense, paving the way for many of "Cliff" Battles' long runs by his expert blocking. He figures prominently in the team's 1938 plans.

No less important in the line is Barber, who tips the beam at a nifty 225 pounds, stands 6 feet 3 inches, and plays what the boys casually refer to as a bang-up game. This will be his fourth year in pro football, all the time having been spent under the Marshall banner.

Season tickets for the Redskins home games are moving at such a brisk pace that sections of lower grandstand seats, as well as lower boxes, also have been added to the reserved list, and may be procured at the club office.

D. C. Net Player Scores an Upset

John Curtis, of Ithaca, N. Y., runner-up last year, won from Frank Rosenbaum, of New York, 6—4, 6—3, and George Dunkin, of Pine Bluff, Ark., won in love sets from H. B. Lee, of Mountain Lakes.

Bronchial Ailment Will Keep Johnny Stone Out Rest of Year

Johnny Stone's diamond career was abruptly terminated for the season yesterday upon advice of physicians who have been treating the Nationals' outfielder for a troublesome bronchial ailment.

Clark Griffith, club president, said he believed it best for Stone to take the prescribed rest in an effort to regain the form that made him one of the league's outstanding flyhawks. Griffith said physicians have not yet diagnosed the player's ailment fully, and that he will remain in Georgetown Hospital for another few days at least.

Stone frequently complained of sharp pains in his chest after the start of the campaign, and never actually reached top playing form. Known throughout the league as an ace defensive player with a rifle-like arm, he also was a feared batter and carved out a .330 average last season.

JOHNNY STONE

This year he was batting an anemic .235 when finally benched by Manager Bucky Harris. He started on the last western trip with the club but was sent home from Chicago for hospitalization when his illness reached a more serious aspect. He may go to his home in Tullahoma, Tenn., to rest after being discharged from the hospital.

Stone's absence from the Senator line-up will be sorely felt. As a regular he has never hit below .315. Harris has used him in the clean-up spot against right-handed pitchers, shifting him to fifth position against left-handers.

With Johnny out of the line-up, the veteran Al Simmons has been playing leftfield. If Al continues his terrific batting spree, Harris will use him in Stone's position for the rest of the season. If he should slump, Harris has Goose Goslin and Rookie Taft Wright.

Golden Bears Beat Huskies for Second

Columbia Places Fourth in Varsity Race; New Time of 18 Minutes 19 Seconds Betters Mark of Washington, Made Last Year.

By Harry Cross.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27.—Navy's gallant eight-oared varsity crew gave their strength down to the last ounce for Buck Walsh, their stricken coach, this afternoon and beat out California, by one and a fifth seconds, a third of a shell's length, in the most sensational boat race the Hudson has seen in many years.

Driven on to superlative effort by an emotional determination, in a thrilling finish at 40 beats to the minute through the pelting rain, the Middies acted like supermen and ended the six-year domination of the Western crews. Navy smashed the four-mile record made by Washington last year by 14 2-5 seconds, in the remarkable time of 18 minutes, 14 seconds.

The West's share of the regatta today came in the freshmen and junior varsity races, Washington beating out California in the junior varsity by a third of a length and California defeating Washington in the freshmen race by a quarter of a length.

Walsh in Hospital.

The Navy coach received a spine injury two days ago and was strapped to his hospital cot. Walsh peered through his big binoculars and through the mist and rain saw his oarsmen pull the Navy shell over tumbled water in a heart-breaking finish. The hot pace set by Navy pulled three other crews, California, Washington and Columbia, over the line faster than the old record of 18 minutes, 33 3-5 seconds.

The largest delegation from the United States Navy that has ever been at Poughkeepsie saw the great triumph of the Midshipmen, for there was a fleet of six U. S. destroyers in the river and aboard them, the second class from Annapolis, 550 strong. Their joy tonight knew no bounds.

This is the crew which gave the water-logged Poughkeepsie regatta its biggest achievement this evening. Bow, I. G. Peterson, George Bullard, Kit Kittler, George Whiteside, A. B. Yeates, Henry Lee, Neal Almgren and the stroke was Paul Schultz. Elmer Knapp was the Coxswain.

Navy In Outside Lane.

Navy had the outside lane farthest from shore, Wisconsin went out in the lead and it was not until the crews had gone a mile that the Navy shell poked out in front by a deck with California, Washington and Columbia rowing along close behind.

After the racing start Navy settled down to 30 strokes and there was a beautiful run to the shell at the slow beat. The midshipmen held their lead with California always threatening them until the three and a half mile mark was passed at the mid-Hudson Bridge. Here the real battle was fought. California, shooting the beat up to 36 moved up even with Navy and then went a quarter of a length in front.

It looked like another victory for the Pacific Coast.

Schultz and the men behind him sent their beat from 34 to 35, then 36 and 37 and in the last quarter of a mile, Navy's shell moved along like something alive. California's slight lead began to fade through the fog and rain and the Navy blades scooped up the water with rhythmic strength. Navy drew upon even terms with California and the shells went along for a stretch as a team, stroke for stroke.

Sends Beat to 38.

With the finish line less than 200 yards away Schultz shot the pace up to 38, then to 39 and when the Navy oars were sweeping through the tossing water at 40 beats to the minute, the shell moved its prow in front. The pace was terrific and California tried frantically to meet this final challenge.

California was rowing at 37 and could get no higher than 38, the supreme effort of the Golden Bears under the drive of their 156-pound stroke, Kirk Smith. Navy held the superhuman pace right through the last ten strokes, rowing with the coordination of a machine. One grand terrific haul of water and the eight blades lifted the shell home in front.

So ended the long reign of Pacific Coast rowing which many Eastern oarsmen before this race predicted was an impossible accomplishment. California had avenged the defeat by Washington last April and beat out the world's champion Washington crew by five and two-fifths seconds. Don Hume, the great Olympic stroke, was rowing his last race but he did not have the men behind him that he has had for the past two years and Hume bowed his way out of intercollegiate rowing in third place.

Washington's Efforts Frantic.

Columbia was fourth, just as the blue and white oarsmen predicted last week they would be. Washington made frantic efforts all the way down the course to catch Navy and California, and every time Hume sent up the stroke, Henry Wheeler, Columbia's 18-year-old stroke, pushed the beat up with him and stuck stubbornly to the Huskies' rudder right through to the end. This was the best performance Hugh Glendon and his young Columbia boys have made on the Hudson in four years.

Wisconsin, last a year ago, on their first return to the big race in many years, found a ray of hope in finishing in fifth place, seven seconds behind Columbia. Cornell and Syracuse were the disappointments of the race, Cornell finishing sixth, four and four-fifths seconds behind Wisconsin, and Syracuse was last, two and two-fifth seconds behind Cornell.

The Washington junior varsity scored a surprising triumph over California, coming up in the last quarter mile of the 3-mile race to beat out their traditional rivals in 13.49 1-5, with California one-fifth second behind in second place. Navy was third, Syracuse fourth, Cornell fifth and Columbia last.

Washington had the freshman race in hand most of the way in the 2-mile race. Coming under the railroad bridge a mile from the finish, the young Huskies had command of a lead of a length and a quarter. The California freshmen gradually whittled away the lead, and by sending the beat to 34 lapped the Huskies' shell, and in the last quarter of a mile the two crews battled it out, stroke for stroke, California's great finishing sprint carrying them home by a quarter of a length.

Since Walsh's injury a couple of day's ago, the Navy crew has been in charge of Cy Austen, who rowed for Walsh here four years ago. The poise of the Midshipmen has been remarkable. The forced absence of the coach found the whole squad keyed to a tremendous urge to carry out Walsh's prediction to his men that they could win this race if they settled down and rowed as they were rowing a month ago. They carried on with that stimulation which only youth can generate when it faces impossible odds. When they were moving swiftly through the Hudson's rain-tossed waters in record time this afternoon, they were doing it for Buck.

Al Simmons Boosts Nats

By a Staff Correspondent.

Boston, June 27.—From out of the West came the Nats tonight, labeled as a rising power in the American League circles and for one paramount reason:

Al Simmons.

The booming bat of the broad-shouldered Pole, heard incessantly on the Washington club's recently concluded Western trip, has transformed the Nats.

For the first time in a decade the Washington club takes rank as one of the slugging outfits of the American League, and to Simmons they owe their new and gratifying distinction.

As the Nats look forward to a three-game series with the Red Sox, starting tomorrow, they are counting heavily on the amazing comeback of the 35-year-old Simmons. In a return to the batting glories that were Simmons' in the halcyon days of the Philadelphia Athletics, the stocky Pole has been a transcendent figure in the recent adventures of the Nats.

One home run a game for the last six games the veteran leftfielder has averaged. With men on bases he has been plain poison to opposition pitchers. As in his heyday, he is hitting to all fields with that long, powerful stroke. His batting average for the Western trip was .375.

Despite the fact that the Nats are six and a half games behind the league-leading Indians, Manager Bucky Harris' club has reason to feel more optimistic than at any time since it lost the lead at Boston six weeks ago.

Because, in addition to Simmons, the other members of the Nat's outfield, George Case and Sammy West, are also pounding the ball at a fancy rate and of late, Harris' pitching staff has done an amazing about-face.

In Harris' hour of need, the veteran Harry Kelley has proved a veritable shot in the arm for the Washington pitching staff. Victorious in his last two starts, he has allowed only one run in 18 innings.

And yesterday, at St. Louis, Wesley Ferrell, whose recent disasterous outings engendered grave doubt that he would prove an asset to the team in the remaining months of the race, regained winning form. Ferrell's eight scoreless innings against the Browns were a tremendous pick up, for Harris.

Kelley, Ferrell and Leonard—Harris now visions those three as an acceptable nucleus for his pitching plans. Leonard's last affair was an eight-hit shut-out of the White Sox. Tomorrow, Harris will send Leonard and his knuckle ball against the Red Sox in the series opener.

Lorton Browns Win.

Davis pitched the Lorton Browns to their ninth straight victory of the season at Lorton, Va., defeating Russell Motors, 8 to 7. Plumb pitched for the losers.

A. C. Compton's Gerald Takes Delaware Feature in Muddy Battle

Sun Celerina Runs Second; Kenty Third

Winner Pays $9 Ticket; Scores by a Length and Quarter.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 27.—A. C. Compton's Gerald came with a bold rush through a muddy stretch to win the Tercentenary, today's feature race, from four colts and fillies and supply a $9 payoff to his scattered backers. With Jockey Al Shelhamer, who has been riding only occasionally due to a recent injury, doing the booting, the 4-year-old gelding forged to the wire a length and a quarter ahead of Sun Celerina, the favorite in the colors of Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Kenty, E. R. Pike's son of Teddy, finished third with Siam and Giant Killer comprising the "also ran" department.

Gerald, away from the winner's circle since last Preakness Day at Pimlico, found another muddy, sticky track under him and celebrated. His time was a poor 1:49 1-5, but served the purpose.

The morning rains virtually swamped the track and, although the skies ceased to fire during the latter part of the program, the horses performed through a mist that all but erased colors along the backstretch. The program drew a crowd of only 6,000 and betting dropped below the $200,000 mark.

Sun Celerina, with light weight, bounded to the front at the break. Gerald was in close attendance, however, and Shelhamer went to the outside to make his move on the swing into the stretch. Sun Celerina, placed to the whip, made a game bid to hang on through the early stretch, but Gerald, hard urged by Shelhamer, had the most punch.

Mrs. J. H. O'Donnell's Jinx proved anything but a "jinx" in the first race for those who cashed a $10.60 mutuel. Making her third start of the meeting and the year, Jinx stepped to the wire four lengths in advance of Golden Key, with Green Mist, the favorite, third in the field of seven. Apprentice L. Dupps had only to sit still on the winning filly.

Culdee, out of the W. F. Hitt stable, picked the second race to win the first race of his career. Opposed by eight other juveniles, this son of Sun Meadow scored a length victory over Mrs. F. J. Heller's Critt. The latter came from last place and closed a length short of a dead heat. Humming was third after meeting trouble soon after the break. Culdee paid $24.30.

The day's steeplechase event was "no contest." Lord Rock, in the maroon and cherry of Bayard Warren, won by a conservative 30 lengths and was well in hand at the end. If The Stag 2d had finished with a jockey, the finish might have been closer. However, he bounced Jockey McGee to the turf at the fourteenth fence. Rock Sure finished second and Good Chance third, with Arapal the only other finisher. Jockey J. McGovern continued to dominate the steeplechases here. Lord Rock's triumph being his third in a row. Lord Rock paid $7.70.

Sun Inplay behaved himself as all odds-on favorites should behave, winning with speed in reserve to pay a scant $2.70 mutuel in the fourth race. Fair Company was second and Carlport third. The poor racing conditions led to four scratches and only four starters went to the post.

Fight

new rule in the code which reads that fighters must weigh in a second time only in the event of a 24-hour postponement. And we don't know yet whether the fight actually has been postponed."

That rule wasn't in the book when we signed the contract," said Dundee. "It didn't say nothing about not weighing in a second time. All it said was they must weigh on the date of the fight and that's what I want to do."

"Boys, boys, be reasonable," moaned Ahearn tearing at his hair. "Please listen to reason, don't be like schoolboys."

"Who's a schoolboy," shouted Fishel. "This guy's just trying to be smart. Who's he think he is, and what's he wantta do, run the show and dictate to everybody else? The fight was supposed to be tonight—that's the date of the fight, and my fighter weighed in, and we're not going to weigh again."

Ahearn tried to bring the warring factions together, but they turned on him like a pack of snarling wolfhounds. He pleaded with Dundee, then with Fishel, then appealed to Miller to "do something about this."

Miller, meanwhile, was polling the commission members by telephone.

"We'll do as the commission says," he announced firmly.

"That's what I wanna do," said Dundee.

Ahearn again attempted to iron out their difficulties, and was almost shoved through a wall into the employment office next door. Then Dundee pulled out a check for $450 received a few hours before from Australia.

"If you're so anxious to fight and so confident of winning, cover this," he said to Fishel.

"I'll fight you winner take all," snarled Fishel.

"That's an idea," piped up Bob Addie, "why don't you two fight."

"That's all right with me," Fishel barked.

"You're just like your fighter," sneered Dundee, "you talk a good bout."

"Boys," Miller announced, putting down the telephone, "the commission has voted to weight in again tomorrow."

Fishel threatened to withdraw with this, but compromised with a prediction that Abrams will flatten Furr in one round.

"Yeah, that's right," seconded George, "I'll lay him away in one."

"I've got him just where I want him," grinned Dundee, leaving the commission offices. "The kid's worried to death and all upset. With that third-class manager he's got taking off 4½ pounds in a week, you know he'll be a soft touch for Phil. Yeah, there'll be a knockout in the first round, but Furr's not going to be on the deck."

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CULDEE, $24.30, $10.60, $5.00; CRITT, $11.80, $5.90; HUMMING, $4.40.

CULDEE, away in good position, raced between horses for 3 furlongs, drew clear and, under driving tactics, was not seriously threatened. CRITT, slow to begin and taken to the outside for racing room, came with a rush through the stretch. HUMMING, bothered when in close quarters directly after the break, came gamely at the end to show a good effort.

Daily double, Jinx and Culdee, paid $81.50.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; allowance. Mount Cuba Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:46. Winner, B. †Lost rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LORD ROCK, $7.70, $4.50, $3.50; ROCK SURE, $5.80, $3.60; GOOD CHANCE, $3.00.

LORD ROCK, at home in the heavy going, drew out in the opening quarter, was rated while setting the pace, survived several poor landings and was taken in hand when THE STAG II lost his rider. ROCK SURE was taken under restraint for a mile, failed to rally when placed to a drive and was being eased up at the end. GOOD CHANCE went well placed during the early stages, but tired thereafter.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:17. Winner, W. S. Kilmer's dk. ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNINPLAY, $2.70, $2.40, out; FAIR COMPANY, $2.80, out; CARLPORT, out.

SUNINPLAY, at home in the going, assumed command without effort in the opening quarter, was kept out from the rail in the better going and won with speed in reserve. FAIR COMPANY lacked speed, came around horses to improve his position swinging to the stretch and closed with good courage, but was no match for the winner. CARLPORT had good early speed, but weakened badly.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:46½. Off at 4:51. Winner, Brandywine Stable's br. g. (3), by Sir Greystee—Jeanne Adele. Trained by W. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEEL KING, $7.50, $3.60, $2.70; TROLIGHT, $3.30, $2.50; MAXINE, $2.80.

STEEL KING, hustled to get to the front in the opening furlong and steadied along while setting the pace, rallied when placed to a drive and finished under punishment. TROLIGHT was not hurried in the early stages, saved ground entering the backstretch, came to the outside for racing room and closed with good energy in the middle of the track. MAXINE was a keen forward factor for three-quarters and tired.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:20½. Off at 5:21. Winner, A. C. Compton's b. c. (4), by Pharamond II—Sarah Constant. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $1,300; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 1:49 1-5.

GIANT KILLER	(Driscoll)	116	1	2	5	5	5	5	5	7.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GERALD, $9.00, $3.80, $2.80; SUN CELERINA, $2.90, $2.30; KENTY, $2.60.

GERALD, closest to the pace from the start, responded willingly when shaken up leaving the backstretch, came to the outside of SUN CELERINA and wore down the latter while stoutly handled in the closing sixteenth. SUN CELERINA had speed to go to the top at once, saved ground and tired gradually through the stretch. KENTY closed some ground from a slow beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:54½. Winner, O. B. Wearley's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINTSON, $11.80, $7.10, $4.40; SUN KINCSEN, $3.50, $2.90; EASTER HOLIDAY, $4.50.

MINTSON, favoring the track, assumed command while racing on the inside at the first turn, drew clear and was rated through the stretch while disposing of SUN KINCSEN. The latter, allowed to settle into best stride, came through on the inside to loom menacingly approaching the stretch, but hung in the final drive. EASTER HOLIDAY swung out at the turn entering the backstretch to lose much ground and weakened after going forwardly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:21. Off at 6:21½. Winner, Tall Tree Stable's ch. g. (6), by Abbot's Nymph—Brumina. Trained by L. O'Connell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—U DEMON, $9.40, $4.20, $3.70; BUSHMASTER, $3.60, $3.30; CHANCING, $3.30.

U DEMON, nicely handled, was not pressed while holding forward position to the backstretch, went to the front approaching the stretch to dispose of BUSHMASTER and finished under pressure while faltering. BUSHMASTER took the lead under hustling tactics, set a good pace and closed gamely. CHANCING went up on the outside, losing ground, while getting to contention in the early running and held on gamely.

Selections at Delaware Park.
Dear Al:

If George Washington had been crossing the Delaware today, he could have brought his boat right up to the grandstand. The track resembled the old C. & O. Canal. The track's face-lifting crew just took the afternoon off. A tractor and a harrow could have done little more than stir up the soup. Prince Turley ran in today's first race. When I saw him at Charles Town he looked as if he was on his last legs. He ran next to last today. He has won many a heat and deserves a rest. However, I guess he will go on being patched up in hopes that he can squeeze home in a cheap field. I found the boys here raving about a workout turned in by Menow, pace-setter in the Derby and Preakness. The Hal Price Headley colt went a mile and an eighth in 1:52, going the first 6 furlongs in 1:13 3-5. Menow's trial time matched the track record set here last Saturday by War Magic. Menow goes to the post Wednesday in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs. The announcer here has discarded the familiar, "They're off" and lets the crowd have "There they go." This was first done at Santa Anita. But Brother du Pont and the officials here still flash "foul" instead of "objection." This should make the Benningites feel at home. According to news given out by the track, The Chief and Stagehand are going to show their stuff here Saturday instead of going for the bigger dough in New Enland. Now for some winners. BILL.

First race—Frozen Mask, a winner at this meeting, raced over his head in recent starts and drops back to the right company for this. Needs only the right handling. Mobcap should like the off going and promises to be in the thick of contention. Fooled to take care of the others.

Second race—Apprehend is as good as those ancient legs. With prospects of a soft track, I'm going to try to bounce the veteran home. Nogalo is a fair sort and will be ready if the top one falters. Broadstep should go well.

Third race—Licketysplit is not quite as fast as the name implies but she should be there or thereabouts in this company. I'm going to put her on top. Shot Tower has been passed along to me as one with a royal chance. Airacuda for the minor award.

Fourth race—Bold Message, a winner here, goes for the heavy dough at a short sprint route. Seems capable of handling the 120-pound assignment. Prospectus comes in from New York and is reported fit. Scout About won at box-car odds and should be in the pay circle.

Fifth race—Fleur Du Mal has shown good form over this course and seems to have an edge in a rather open race. Sun Flo likes an off track and probably will get it. False Point for the show end.

Sixth race—Count Tetrarch won his last in somewhat similar company and seems the best suited. Surprise Box is fit as hands can make him, and should be close up in this company. Cornwallis to fill out the money circle.

Seventh race—Petit Jean will like the conditon of the oval and should carry the mail in this group. Countess Lena and Prince Cloud belong in this caliber of platers and promise to give the top one real competition.

Eighth race—Mad Frump hasn't his old class but always could down this kind when not lame. He is reported to have pulled up sound after that good last and I'm going to string along. Mr. Bun for the place and Mischiefmaker to show.

Best bet—Petit Jean.

Sandlot Pick-ups

The Federal Bureau of Investigation nine, which won the first half title in the United States Government League by winning 14 titlts while losing only two, has a young hurler they are calling Johnny Vander Meer 2d . . . His name is Peter Stathis . . . In successive games and with only two days rest, Young Stathis pitched two no-hit, no-run engagements . . . Last Monday he set the Navy Yard crew down, 3-0, and returned to the mound Wednesday to stop the Anacostia team, 7-0 . . . Don't take the first offer a big league scout hands you, Peter.

This column was glad to be informed of the mistake carried in the Sunday article on the American Legion Junior Baseball League . . . We stated that the Police Post, Nash Post and Sergeant Jasper were all tied for first place in the first half race with five wins in seven starts . . . And that is correct . . . But we also stated that the first game of the three-way play-off had been perpetrated with the Police nine defeating Sergeant Jasper . . . And that is wrong . . . It should be added, though, that our information is obtained from a young lad who is trying his best to be obliging while a certain group of those who should be responsible are resting on their oars, content to let somebody else do the work until an error is made.

• • • •

To return to the error: . . . There has not been a play-off tilt at yet . . . The Police-Sergeant Jasper game was played to end the first half schedule . . . But being a postponed engagement due to rain, and the fact that it was performed after the date of the regular first half schedule had closed, put us on the wrong track . . . Today at 5 p. m., at Griffith Stadium, Nash and Police meet in the first game of the first half championship . . . The winner stacks up against Sergeant Jasper in the same ball yard Friday . . .

In the first game of the second half Commercial League race, Shorty Chumbris, former University of Maryland athlete, handled 11 chances without a miscue, three of which, according to reports, were the most spectacular infield plays seen on the sandlots this season . . . Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

FIGURES OF FAME

New York, June 27.—Ten years ago, almost to the day, a tall, rawboned, gangling young fellow got out of a taxi on Michigan boulevard and came into a Chicago hotel. His face was parched by dry winds and his skin was burned brown by a constant sun.

VIDMER.

As he came through the revolving door a group of baseball writers looked up, arose and intercepted him before he reached the registration desk. they didn't have to wait to see what name he signed. They knew he must be the rookie lefthander John McGraw had bought from the Texas League and they were looking for something about which to write.

So they gathered round him and started asking questions and the youngsters, shy and surprised, started backing across the lobby until he was pinned up against the porter's desk . . .

It was an hour before he finally got a chance to register, but the name he wrote in the big book on the desk of the hotel was "Carl Owen Hubbell." It's a name that has come to the attention of the baseball public a great many times since then; a name that has been made famous and which has earned the respect and admiration of a million fans or more. Almost every season has found Carl Owen Hubbell achieving some new prominence, although in between each feat he is almost forgotten as, for ten years, he has gone methodically, quietly about his business.

It was in 1928 that Hubbell arrived in Chicago and reported to the Giants. The next year he pitched a no-hit game against the Pirates, the only no-hit game of the season in either major league. His name became prominent for the first time.

In 1930 and 1931 he went calmly along his way, winning 17 games one year and 14 the next, and when he came back with 18 victories for a sixth-place club in 1932, he was recognized as old reliable as far the Giants were concerned.

Pitching to a Pennant.

But it was the following year that he came into his own. Almost single-handed, almost on his own square shoulders he lifted the sixth-place club of the previous campaign to the National League pennant, winning 23 games, the top mark of the league that year, and leading the circuit also with an earned run average of 1.66, the best mark in the National League since Grover Cleveland Alexander's 1.55 made in 1916. During that campaign he pitched 46 consecutive innings without allowing a run, a record for the league, and he went on from there to pitch the Giants to a triumph over Washington in the World's Series, striking out the first three men who faced him.

The name of Carl Owen Hubbell was heard many times that summer and it was placed in prominence also during the winter when he was chosen the outstanding athlete of the year. But he modestly retreated into the back ground again and the spotlight was turned on more colorful performers.

But in 1934 he stepped forth once more. This time it was in the all-star game. He was selected as the National League's starting pitcher and he faced one of the greatest arrays of hitting power ever assembled. But in quick succession and in order he struck out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin. With that amazing achievement he was crowned King Carl, the star of stars.

One Thing After Another.

And so it has been all through his career, one stunning, sensational feat after another. He won 23 games in 1935, he won 16 straight in 1936 and prolonged his streak of successes through the first eight games of 1937, making 24 victories in a row over a span of two seasons. This season he started out with five straight triumphs by the significant scores of 3-2, 4-2, 3-2, 3-1 and 11-2.

The other day he won his eighth game of the current campaign and that was the 200th victory he has turned in during his major league career. Quite a number of pitchers have won 200 games or more in the majors, but here again Hubbell's feat is unique, for he is the only National League pitcher who has won 200 games for one club. All his triumphs have been in the name of the Giants.

Walter Johnson won 414 games for Washington, Chief Bender won 210 games for the Athletics, George Dauss turned in 218 for the Tigers and Urban Faber contributed 252 victories to the White Sox, while Ted Lyons has just completed 200 victories for the same club, but they all were in the American League.

It really wasn't my intention to become so involved in statistics when I started writing about Carl Hubbell, and yet the figures are the most impressive thing about him. A no-hit game, 46 consecutive scoreless innings, 5 straight strikeouts against the American League All Stars, 24 victories in a row, 200 triumphs over a 10-year stretch, an average of 20 a season. These are things that make you sit up and take notice of the prowess of such a pitcher.

Off the Record.

But there are other things about Hub which are interesting also . . . How he was told by Ty Cobb to go back to the minors and forget that screwball he was trying to throw . . . How he came back to the majors and threw a screwball to Mancuso while he was warming up one day . . . and Gus asked him what that was . . . When Hub told him it was just a trick delivery he used to fool with, Mancuso suggested that they make up a signal for it, and it has been his meal ticket ever since.

Pro-Am. Won By Williams, Tornabene

Pair Scores Best-Ball of 61 in Tourney at Baltimore.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bob Williams, Naval Academy golf professional, and John Tornabene, Clifton Park, scored a nine under par best-ball of 61 over the Clifton Park course in Baltimore yesterday to win the bi-weekly Middle Atlantic pro-amateur event. The pros were paced by Ralph Beach in the sweepstakes, with a 67, three under par, a new competitive course mark.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, and Eddie Dean, also of the Landover course, tied for second with two other pairs, with 63s, Beach and Henry Hamp, Hillendale, and Johny Bass, host pro, and Al Laur, Clifton Park.

Four pro-amateur teams tied for the next prize, Bass and Eddie Meyer, of the host club; Williams and Joe Wilkins, Clifton Park, a father-and-son combination from Rolling Road; Alex Taylor, pro, and his son, George, and Beach and Nate Kaufman, Suburban, all with 64s.

Spencer also was second in the pro sweeps with a 60, from nines of 35, even par, and 33, two strokes under. Bass and Williams were next with 69s.

Tornabene matched his pro partner's 69 aided by three handicap strokes, as the winners compiled the nine under par best ball.

Spencer and Bean were the only District representatives in the money Leo Walper and Frank Williams missing by two strokes. Walper also played with Roger and Harry ePacock, while Gene Larkin, Woodmont, and Tony Sylvester, Capital, each competed with three partners.

Beach holed a three iron shot on the 440-yard sixteenth hole for an eagle deuce and this enabled him to beat Spencer in the sweepstakes. After his outgoing nine of even par, Spencer started back with three straight 3's, two birdies and a par.

'International' Mat Show Is Planned

With a couple of Italians, an Irishman, German and Englishman on the menu, Promoter Joe Turner last night was proceeding with plans for his first big "International" wrestling show scheduled Thursday night at Griffith Stadium.

It started out to be merely another evening of quiet, pleasant bone-bending with Danno O'Mahoney, as Irish as a shamrock, cast in the feature bout. Then the thing assumed a slight foreign flavor when Joe Dusek, of German stock, signed to oppose Danno. But the idea of an international set-up didn't occur to Uncle Joe until he obtained Emil Dusek, Joe's brother, and Angelo Savoldi, Joe Savoldi's cousin, for a preliminary.

Then came another Italian in the person of Gino Garibaldi, and an alleged Englishman in Ed (Strangler) White. The Strangler claims to be as English as the king's pants, and drops his h's as easily as he disposes of certain opponents.

'Navy Spirit Did It,' Says Coach

BUCK WALSH, MIDDY MENTOR, SMILES OVER VICTORY FROM HOSPITAL COT.

* * * *

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27.—Broken in body but tremendously happy in spirit, Buck Walsh lay in a hospital room far from the joyous Navy fleet on the Hudson today and said, "You can't beat that Navy spirit."

Injured in a fall early Sunday morning, the gaunt Navy crew coach heard the details of his varsity's smashing regatta victory over the radio. Beside him was his wife, who sped to his side at news of his accident. They were a quietly happy couple.

"They rowed just the way we planned it," said Walsh, as the rain beat against the windows. "But all that planning doesn't mean anything unless your crew has the heart to carry out your plans. Believe me, it takes something to overcome the handicaps those boys have had. I'm more proud of them than I can say.

* * * *

"They came down here yesterday. I tried to cheer them up, laughed and joked with them, but they had a tough time smiling. Finally they told me they had vowed to win this one for me. I guess you know how I felt when they won. They had to keep me from hiring a cab and getting down to cheer them myself.

"Planned it? Sure we planned it. For two years we've been leading in this race and then Washington would come sprinting up and take the lead away and win. I told them to keep ahead of those Washington and California crews and they did almost all the race."

Mrs. Walsh reminded him that California had drawn about even in the last mile.

"Yes, and that's where that Navy spirit came in," said her husband.

* * * *

"Maybe you landsmen don't understand it, but every man in the service does. The Navy can't be beat that easily. I'm darned if I know how they found the strength to fight off that California challenge, but they did. That's spirit, boy, eight men rowing as one, something no coach can give a crew.

"I guess they'll be down tonight. I don't know what to tell them or how to thank them, but I don't think I'll ever be any happier." How about his condition; would he be out of the hospital soon?

"When they start swinging again, I think I'll be with them. We've just started to go. I know the coast won the freshman and junior varsity races, but next year we'll be back here trying again. Navy spirit can do anything, boy, and don't you forget it."

30 May Run In Marathon

Washington distance runners will have their day next Monday, July 4, when the Playground Department and the Takoma Park Citizens Association sponsor their annual 10-mile run for the District A. A. U. championship. Some 30 entries are expected.

The entrants from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newark, Washington and other cities will be shooting for the Star Trophy. The Takoma citizens will also award trophies to the first five men to finish. The Department of Playgrounds will give bronze medals to all other finishers and the A. A. U. will contribute its share by giving a trophy to the first District of Columbia team, and A. A. U. medals to the first three District of Columbia men to come in.

Bill Agee, veteran Baltimore runner, has won the run eight of the nine times it has been held and has a leg on the first-place prize.

The Washington track and field team of Shorb, Jimmy Carrick, Bus Nickolson and Jerry Looney is favored to win the District of Columbia trophy.

The race will start at 1 p. m., at a point below the Railroad Bridge on the Mount Vernon boulevard, and continue over streets of Washington with the finish at Takoma Park pool. Contestants must have their entries filed with Dick Tennyson on July 1.

The race committee consists of Dick Tennyson, Harry Helme, Yank Robbins, Jerry Looney, John Busick, Ralph Harries, James Springman, C. J. Bride, Frank Xanten and Dave Adamson.

Cards Lead League.

The Cardinal A. C. Insects took undisputed possession of first place in the Southeast Boys Club League yesterday by trouncing the Northeast Boys Club, 11-5, and defeating the No. 5 Police Boys Club nine, 5-4. Coppage and McGrow shared the mound honors, while Phillips and Hampton led the Redbirds' attack at bat.

Post Scripts

Tennis talk . . . veteran observers here say the present crop of young players is the best the city has known since Barney Welsh, Gil Hunt, Bud Markey, Bob Considine, Dooley Mitchell, Hugh Lynch and others were cutting their net teeth . . . And this opinion is being borne out by the play of the juveniles in the current District of Columbia championship play at Columbia . . . Davie Johnsen, District junior titleholder; Johnny Hatch, Western High all-round athlete, and DeWitt Smith have been creating a furore by upsetting older and more experienced players in wholesale numbers . . . As this is written all three are in the fourth round and going strong

One of the reasons for the rapid improvement of Davie Johnsen has been the influence of Frank (Buddy) Goeltz, Columbia tennis pro and former well-known amateur player . . . Just the other day they figured in an amusing little skit in the tennis shop . . . It was the eve of Johnsen's crucial quarter-final match with his doubles partner, Hugh Lynch . . . Dave was seated in a chair facing Goeltz while the pro had his back to the door . . . "Davie," he said, "if you want to know how to beat this Lynch I'll tell you. Hit deep to his backhand and short to his forehand. Hugh's backhand is his weakness and for that reason he doesn't use it except when he has to. After you put him deep in the court drop a short cross-court on the other side of the court and you got him" . . . Just then who should appear in the doorway but Mr. Lynch . . . Goeltz, a little startled, smiled weakly. "We were just talking about you, Hugh" . . . Lynch proved a good sport, however, and discussed the strategy with his opponents, even to the point of offering further advice on the matter. . . .

Meyer Wins Junior Medal

Dick Meyer, 17-year-old Manor Club golfer, justified his favorite's role in the District junior championship over his home course yesterday by winning the medal honors with a 1-over-par 71, from nines of 36 and 35.

Myer's score was two strokes lower than the 73 posted by David (Scotty) Ross, Capital Club youngster, who in turn led Bob Brown, of Kenwood, by a stroke, the latter posting two nines of 37 for a 74.

Scores of 84 or better made the championship flight of the event, with all the favored entries qualifying well within the limit. Three had 76, Tom Fitzgerald and George Vass, of Western, and Earl Skinker, Columbia, who had the lowest round of the day in the woods, a 35, but went 6 over perfect figures with a 41 on the back nine to total 76.

Meyer started with a par on the first hole and chipped in from off the green on the second for a birdie 3. He lost the stroke on the third by hitting his tee shot over the green. The medalist three-putted the sixth green and finished the nine in pars to be out in 36.

A 20-foot birdie putt on the eleventh hole, three putts on the sixteenth and seven pars marked the former St. John's Prep captain's back nine of 35, regulation figures.

Ross, Bethesda's No. 1 golfer had nines of 36 and 37 for the second best score.

The late finishers were caught in a downpour of rain that soared the scores, including Jimmy Thompson, Columbia, finalist in the schoolboy tournament, who five putted the last green from 15 feet as a miniature lake formed around the cup.

In the outstanding matches today Meyer meets Cliff Gruver, Washington Golf and Country Club junior titleholder, Brown meets Eric King, Army and Navy, who qualified with an 81, Ross faces Bob Dopohue in the feature encounter, as both were touted as potential champions, Sinker meets Harold Gordon, Indian Spring, and George Vass, Kenwood, Western high ace meets Thompson, Blair representative.

Georgetown Team Trails in Eighth Place; Two Have 82's.

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., June 27.—An unheralded Michigan State senior, Edward J. Flowers, of Grand Rapids, set the pace today for a record field in the opening qualifying round of the forty-first annual national intercollegiate golf championship.

The tall, husky Michigan Stater, like the 158 other collegians who went to the post out of an entry list of 174, failed to solve the puzzling par of the Louisville Country Club, but his 1-over-par 72 gave him a stroke lead at the halfway mark of the qualifying test.

Johnny Burke led the Georgetown team with a pair of 37's for a 74, followed by Billy Shea, 76; Harvey Johnson, 80, and Billy Dettweiler and Charlie Pettijohn, each with 82.

Two University of Michigan entries, Robert Palmer, also of Grand Rapids, and Bill Barclay, of Flint, along with Sid Richardson, of Northwestern; Robert E. Bingham, of Amherst, and Lew Oehmig, of Virginia, were deadlocked with 73's.

Bracketed at 74 were Jack Robinson, of Southern California; Thomas Brand, of Michigan State; John Burke, of Georgetown; Phil Donahue, of Notre Dame, and James Black, of Washington University, St. Louis.

Nine were grouped at 75, including Paul Leslie, of Louisiana State University, president of the intercollegiate association and runner-up for the championship for the last two years.

A total of 57 players scored 78 or better during the day's inaugural shotmaking with indications it would take around 152 or 153 to get into the championship division of 32 that will start match play elimination with two 18-hole rounds on Wednesday

In the team competition, Northwestern took the lead with a total of 302, followed by Stanford with 305, Michigan with 306 and Louisiana State at 308. Virginia and Dartmouth were tied at 310, Michigan State had 311 and Georgetown 312. Princeton, the defending champion, appeared hopelessly out of the running with 316.

With Bill Ackerman.

On Thursday, the first white marlin was caught at Ocean City, and there was hardly any section along the Atlantic coast that did not carry news of it. Yet, only a few days before, and in the same area, there was taken a mako shark. A fish that rates even with any of the other three of the "Big Four" of the great sport fishes; and there was hardly any mention made of the catch.

ACKERMAN

This mako, caught by Bill Price, of Baltimore, was estimated to weigh between 300 and 400 pounds, because there were no scales large enough to weigh it. The largest of the species, as far as our records go, ever to be taken by an angler on the Atlantic Coast north of Bimini in the British West Indies.

The Atlantic Coastal record is held by Ernest Hemingway with a fish weighing 786 pounds and measuring 10 feet 4 inches by 7 feet 1 inch, just 12 pounds under the world record mako caught at Bay of Islands, New Zealand.

Isuropsis mako, New Zealand mako, or just plain mako, belongs to the shark family for only one characteristic—that of having a cartilegenous frame; the only bone in the body being the nodules of dentine in the skin.

* * * *

Probably second to the white shark in ferociousness, it tops every other member of the family, even the thresher, in its jumping proclivities; which are more pronounced than those of the swordfish, and rival those of the large blue marlin. They need take second place for this trait, only to the small white marlin, which have been known to take to the air as many as 47 times in less than 30 minutes.

The tail is that of a fighting fish, evenly divided above and below, and deeply forked. The teeth, long, slender and fanglike. In direct variance to the well-known triangular shape of every other member of the family. In coloration, they resemble somewhat the swordfish but far more beautiful, for the blue of the back is more nearly the blue of a tropical summer sky, and the sides the pure silver of fleecy clouds, shading almost to pure white on the belly.

The reasonably light tackle used by most sportsmen for the white marlin is wholly inadequate for these heavier fish, that in every probability range in weight up to 3,000 pounds. So, if you are one of the many thousands of anglers fishing this area, and have heavier tackle, be sure to take it along; for, only a few short years ago Ocean City was unknown as a big game fishing point. Now it is accepted as the greatest point of congregation for while marlin, and with every one of the "Big Four" known to inhabit these waters, is it too much to expect that it might become known for them also?

Only 126 miles from Washington, by way of the Annapolis ferry to Matapeke, Easton and Salisbury. The augmented service of the ferry this season makes the trip less than four hours. For your convenience, they leave Annapolis daily and Sunday 7:25, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 a. m., 1, 1:30, 2, 3, 3:30, 4, 5, 5:30, 6, 7, 7:30, 8, 10 and 12. Leave Matapeke 7:25, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 a. m., 1, 2, 2:30, 3, 4, 4:30, 5, 6, 6:30, 7, 8, 8:30 and 11 p. m.

There are some 60-odd boats at Ocean City open to charter for the offshore marlin fishing, with the rates running from $30 to $40 per day, according to the size and capacity. Even the smallest can fish four comfortably and up to six and seven on the larger ones, which makes it a really cheap days sport.

Last season, boats from Miami and the Jersey coast came to this little town of hardly more than a thousand winter population, perched on a sand bar between the ocean and Sinepuxent Bay, to augment the fine local fleet of offshore boats. Already this year they have arrived, in even greater numbers.

May Building In the District Makes Big Gain

Contracts for $6,530,000 Is Rise of 86 Per Cent Over April.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The District of Columbia went beyond the country's average building trend in May with a gain of more than $3,000,000 over April contracts, according to a monthly summary completed by H. A. Johns, Washington manager of the Dodge Reports division of F. W. Dodge Corporation.

"There is strong encouragement in the record of contracts awarded here in May," Mr. Johns explains. "Private and public work moved far over the April levels. Residential activity continued in the upward trend which has been evident since January."

All the May building and construction contracts awarded in the Washington area totaled $6,530,000. That includes an 86 per cent gain over the April awards, $3,518,000. Mrs. Johns emphasizes that "these local figures are based on actual contract awards, not permit grants." An average May gain of 28 per cent over April was recorded for the building and construction activities of the 37 Eastern States.

Privte Work.

Private work accounted for $5,546,000 of the Washington area total. The May figures were 88 per cent over those of April, $2,951,000. An average gain of 14 per cent was found in the Eastern States. The May contracts to be financed from public funds totaled $948,000, a gain of 74 per cent from the April level of $567,000. These did not follow the trend of the 37 Eastern States, where a 45 per cent rise was established in May.

Residential contracts awarded in May moved to the $3,463,000 level in a 36 per cent rise from the April contracts, $2,539,000. The gain here was well ahead of the Eastern States' average rise of 11 per cent in residential work. Nonresidential contracts went to the $2,561.000 mark from April's $421,000. This is not in line with the average drop of 3 per cent in nonresidential contract valuations throughout the Eastern States.

The Washington metropolitan area included in the Dodge summary is made up of the District, Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Virginia; Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Maryland. Mr. Johns reported on local heavy engineering construction projects to be financed from public funds and by the utilities. These totaled $506,000 in May, a drop fom April awards, $558,000.

Washington Trade.

Business conditions in the District of Columbia have been reasonably good, it is revealed by the annual report of William B. Willard, chairman of the commercial trade activities committee of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. Chairman Willard, who is a vice president of National Savings & Trust Co., notes in his report that at close of business December 31, 1937, the banks of Washington had deposits in excess of $322,000,000, an advance of $110,000,000 from those of June, 1933.

Here, in the National Capital, he reminded, the monthly pay roll, public and private, approximates $40,000,000. The first three months of 1938 showed department stores sales off about 6 per cent from the comparative period a year ago. Automobile sales, new and used cars, were 17,000 for the first three months of the current year, as compared with 23,000 for the corresponding period of 1937.

Utility companies here reported gains in customers, however, and District bank deposits increased from December 31, 1937, to nearly $335,000,000, as of March 7, 1938, or but $6,000,000 under the record high of March 31, 1937.

C. L. U. Examinations.

There are 1,150 life insurance men in the United States who have just completed the annual examinations for the "Chartered Life Underwriter" designation granted by the American College of Life Underwriters, according to a statement by Dwight T. Scott, president of the local Chartered Life Underwriter Chapter. This exceeds by 15 per cent the largest number of applicants in any past year. Examinations were held June 9, 10 and 11 at 78 colleges and universities throughout the country. The local examinations this year were conducted by Dean Kayser, at George Washington University, where 11 Washington underwriters were applicants for the C. L. U. designation.

Fitzpatrick Biography.

A biography of Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, new president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is carried in the latest issue of Dollars and Sense, its publication. Mr. Fitzpatrick was born in 1906 and came to this city in 1916, after spending ten years in Portsmouth, Va. He entered the employ of Second National Bank as a runner in 1921, and was elected an assistant cashier in 1931.

Cotton Yields To Realizing

New York, June 27 (AP).—Morning advances in cotton today were lost under July liquidation and profit-taking. October eased from 8.83 to 8.71 and closed at 8.72, with final prices 4 to 6 points net lower.

The market opened steady in partial response to firm Liverpool and Bombay cables and owing to rains in the belt over the week-end. However, there was more disposition to take profits as March and May advanced toward the 9-cent level. July liquidation persisted throughout the day in advance of first notice day tomorrow. There was also spot house selling and some hedging attributed to foreign cotton in the later months. The trade absorbed contracts fairly well on the reaction.

Steel Scrap Prices Again Advanced

New York, June 27 (AP).—Dow Jones & Co. said today in a Pittsburgh dispatch that No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap sold at $12.75 a ton, an advance of 25 cents over the previous sale and a new high on the current recovery move. The present range is $12.25-$12.75.

Wheat Drops With Larger Visible Supply

Market Reacts to First Increase Since Last December.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27.—Faced by the first increase the United States visible supply has shown since December, Chicago wheat prices late today fell almost 2 cents a bushel. The tumble was from earlier gains of about a cent, and was followed by fractional rallies.

To a considerable extent, wheat paralleled the course of securities. Bearish results of the visible supply increase were due to suggestions that with the domestic harvest movement being augmented, the visible would be constantly enlarged from now on.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with Saturday's finish, July 76⅞ to 77, September 77⅞ to 78; corn unchanged to ⅜ off, July 57½ to 57⅝, September 59 to 59⅛; oats unchanged to ¼ down; rye showing ⅜ to ½ drop, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 5 cents advance.

Steel Wages Depend Upon New Orders

New York June 27 (AP).—The question as to whether the United States Steel Corporation will seek lower wage schedules, it was reported in usually reliable steel circles today, will probably depend on how much business is attracted by the sharply reduced price schedules which the big steel maker announced for its products last Friday.

The steel wage situation has been spotlighted since the corporation, in a brief statement last Saturday, said none of its officials had given any assurances a wage reduction would not follow the price cut. Steel producers generally were said to have followed United States Steel price reduction, although some, including the Bethlehem Steel Co., merely said "we are meeting competition."

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Profit-Taking Features Day's Market But Sentiment Remains Bullish.

New York, June 27.—A good job well done deserves a rest, and the stock market took it today. With its unbroken record of successive advances last week having added more than 6 points to the composite average, the list settled back a trifle on profit taking today but there was no hint of any change in sentiment. The reaction had all the characteristics of a normal setback of a technical nature.

The above average eased a third of a point. Trading continued in good volume, amounting to 2,105,840 shares But it was gratifying to the bullish forces that on the dips the activity tended to dwindle. Aviation stocks moved against the trend and leaders of the group closed with small fractional gains. Utilities also found some friends, but other major divisions ended with the weight slightly on the downside. While individual losses ran to as much as 4 points in high-priced Allied Chemical, the big drops were the exceptions and most of the speculative favorites were somewhat around the 1-point mark.

Having led on the upside last week, the steels naturally took the brunt of the day's sell-off, and from the standpoint of financial news it was the steel industry that continued to hold the limelight, in view of the reduction made in the price of steel products and the delay in effecting a corresponding reduction in wages of steel workers.

No effort has been made by the steel corporation to cancel its agreement on wages, although Saturday it cleared up the misinterpretation which followed the President's fireside chat by stating definitely that none of its official had given any pledge to maintain present wage rates. But the fact that the President spoke of such assurances makes it desirable for the corporation to use every effort to avoid cutting wages.

Aircrafts Strong.

United States Steel sold down 1¼ points today and Bethlehem was off 1¾ and Republic about a point. Active in the aviation division were Curtiss Wright, United, Martin, Douglas and North American. Douglas gained 1¾ and the others were up fractions. Most active stock on the list today was Anaconda. The coppers were given a whirl for a period during the session but were unable to stand out against the general trend, Anaconda closing down ⅝, while International Nickel was off 1⅛. Among the motors Chrysler gave up 1⅝. Central was the most active of the rail division and was down a good fraction along with the balance of the leading carriers.

Brokers reported the street to be holding to its bullish frame of mind and a number pointed out that the market has plenty of buying orders near the present levels. These orders apparently have been entered by those who missed the move last week and are waiting for a reaction.

An increase in the United States visible supply of wheat brought setbacks to the wheat market today after early advances. At the close futures were unchanged to ½ cent lower. Cotton was off 4 to 6 points on July liquidation after early advances of 3 to 7 points which carried prices to new highs for the movement.

Bonds Irregular.

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular today, save for a few bright spots. Speculative industrial issues had a good tone, and International Telephone obligations surged forward. Railroad obligations were mixed. United States Treasury issues and other money market bonds were uncertain, with money clearly being realized for employment in the equities division. Foreign dollar bonds proved dull. Trading totaled only $7,130,000, although the active markets last week saw dealings running to $10,000,000.

The speculative railroad section remained of greatest general interest. Bonds in classifications just under the best were in demand and gains ranging to 4 points were recorded in such issues. New York Central bonds advanced, while Southern Pacific issues dropped, although these systems are considered in comparable circumstances. Baltimore & Ohio bonds drifted lower, and Southern Railway issues improved. Default bonds showed similar variations. Some high grade rails were better, whereas the strictly money market issues dipped.

Industrial bonds were in favor, with gains ranging to 2 points. Steel and other industrial obligations joined the trend, with convertibles sharply higher in some instances. International Telephone 4½s, due next year, jumped another point on announcement that plans for European financing by a subsidiary had been completed, and the payment funds thus assembled. Local traction issues improved.

United States Treasury issues were idle and inclined to drift lower. Long-term direct obligations showed losses to 10-32 point, and the guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations were similarly easy. In counter trading the demand for Treasury notes and bills slackened. Best utility bonds were off in the corporate section. Dealers in municipals reported falling demand.

Mo. Pac. Report Is Misleading, SEC Charges

Trial Examiner Says That Railroad Made 'False Financial Statement.'

By the Associated Press.

Trial Examiner Richard Townsend told the Securities Commission yesterday that the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. published "false financial statements" to facilitate the borrowing of $115,700,000 from the public and the Reconstruction Corporation.

Townsend, sifting evidence obtained at recent public hearings, made no recommendation on what penalty, if any, should be imposed on the now bankrupt carrier. The only penalty that the commission could impose would be to suspend or prohibit further trading of Missouri Pacific securities on the New York Stock Exchange. Townsend, however, called attention to a letter from the exchange saying this penalty would "impose a hardship and possible loss upon the stockholders who are innocent of wrongdoing."

The commission took Townsend's report under advisement.

Townsend also accused Price, Waterhouse & Co., the auditors employed by the railroad, of certifying to balance sheets which "failed to present fairly the financial position" of the railroad.

Auditors' Statement.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Price, Waterhouse & Co., certified public accountants, accused before the SEC today of failing "to present fairly the financial position" of Missouri Pacific Railroads in audits, tonight issued the following statement:

"In the balance sheets of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. on December 31, 1934, and December 31, 1935, the terminal shares transaction was reflected in precise accordance with instructions given to the chief accounting officer of the railroad by the accounting division of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Neither these instructions or good accounting practice called for inclusion in the balance sheet of the so-called liability of $14,000,000 under these contracts, then the subject of litigation. As a result of this litigation, this so-called liability was completely and forever barred as a claim against the trustee and the debtor estate (see annual report for 1937, pages 9-10).

"The balance sheets of December 31, 1934, and December 31, 1935, both contained footnotes mentioning the existence of the terminal shares litigation, and in each year the certification by the accountants was expressly made subject to the qualification that "no provision has been made for pending claims and law suits, the amount of which cannot be determined at this time."

Dr. P. B. Matz, Research Unit Chief, Expires

Famed Pathologist Was on Tour Inspecting Veterans' Hospitals.

Word was received here yesterday of the sudden death Saturday of Dr. Philip B. Matz, 53, chief of the medical research subdivision of the Veterans' Administration, who lived at 1620 Fuller street northwest.

Death occurred at Santa Monica, Calif., where Dr. Matz was visiting as a part of a two-month tour of Veterans' Administration hospitals he began June 1. He had gone to the beach at Santa Monica with a group of physicians of the administration facility at Los Angeles.

Burial Set Thursday.

Earlier, Dr. Matz attended a series of round-table discussions on tuberculosis at San Francisco and Los Angeles in connection with the annual meetings of the American Academy of Tuberculosis Physicians and the National Tuberculosis Association.

Burial services will be held Thursday in the National Cemetery at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. His widow, the former Miss Eleanor Crampton, of Fort Leavenworth, left yesterday to attend the rites.

Dr. Matz was known throughout the medical profession as a pathologist and as a frequent contributor to publications on medicine. His record as a pathologist in the Administration's field organization led in 1925 to his selection as head of medical research in the central office here, where studies covered virtually every field of medical science

Honored by Many Groups.

He was a native of Baltimore. He held degrees from Mather College and the Long Island College of Medicine.

Dr. Matz was a fellow of the American Medical Association, the American College of Physicians, the American Society of Clinical Pathologists and the American Academy of Tuberculosis Physicians. He was also a member of the Kansas State Medical Society, the Clinical Club of Washington, the Torch Club, the Sojourners, the American Legion, the Military Order of the World War and the Association of Military Surgeons of and the Masonic order.

Besides his wife, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Oscar Metz, of Baltimore, and three brothers and two sisters, also of Baltimore.

Capt. Thompson, Retired Chaplain Of Navy, Succumbs

Capt. Frank Thompson, 82, retired Navy chaplain, died yesterday at his home, 3031 Newark street northwest, after an extended illness.

The son of the late Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, of Mississippi, Capt. Thompson was born in Portage, Wis., and entered the Navy in 1881, being assigned to a sailing vessel for training. His last service was under the command of Admiral Moffett on the Great Lakes. He retired in 1920 and has made his home in Washington.

He was a member of the Military Order of the Dragon, Chevalier of the Cross, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and was a veteran of the Chinese Relief Expedition and the Spanish-American War.

Surviving Capt. Thompson are three daughters, Miss Helen Thompson, Mrs. J. P. Hayes, and Mrs. A. B. Anderson, of Jolla, Calif.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Epiphany tomorrow at 2 p. m. with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Seeks $15,000 Yearly With a Smile

Mrs. Martha Barkley Ryan, 22, went into court yesterday at New York and asked a supreme court justice to grant her a separation from Basil A. (Pat) Ryan and $15,000 a year alimony. She said she had lived with Ryan "only one night" and that the few days she had known the grandson and heir of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan were "just like a merry-go-round." She is shown in court.

Man, 32, and Bride, 19, Mysteriously Killed

St. Louis, June 27 (U.P.).—William Gordon Bates, 32, and his 19-year-old bride of four weeks were found shot to death in their home late today.

Police at first considered the case one of murder and suicide, but when it was discovered Bates had been shot once in the head and again in the body, said a new investigation would be made.

1519 K St. DIstrict 1015.

American University Park.
(First-floor bedroom)—$11,500.
Originally built for a contractor to occupy himself, this detached brick home features an excellent living arrangement with the much-sought downstair bedroom and bath, a comfortable living room, spacious kitchen with breakfast nook, an additional kitchenette in the dry, light cellar. Three bedrooms and 2 baths upstairs. A beautiful rear lawn with shade trees and flowers provides delightful hours of recreation. Brick garage. Oil heat. The present owner has compulsory reasons for selling.

Near 14th & Ingraham
$10,950.
This center hall, true Colonial home, containing 8 rooms and 3 baths, has just been reduced $2,000 in price because it must be sold immediately. It is situated on a lot covered with flowering shrubs and fruit trees. The house needs some repairs, but at the price offered is the best value we have seen in this section in years.

Chevy Chase View, Md.
Recent Army orders require sale of this desirable suburban home. Appealing to people of taste, it has all the requisites for delightful entertaining. It is built of brick and frame on a nicely landscaped lot, 75x230 feet. The floor plan gives an idea of its unusualness—a living room 23x12, large dining room and kitchen, a living porch 19x9, screened and shaded. Second floor has two spacious bedrooms, inclosed sunporch, additional smaller bedroom, paneled knotty pine recreation room, toilet in basement. Beautiful flower gardens. Junior high school in course of construction in rear of property. Without using superlatives, this property is outstanding.

Life's Darkest Moment.

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't know much about dressin' for different kinds of parties, but I always thought that there were just two ways to dress. You either wore a dress suit or you didn't.

The other day I called on a friend of mine who has the reputation of havin' the finest wardrobe in Hollywood and I says, "What is the proper way to dress for these real high-class parties out here?" He says, "Well, if it's strictly formal, you'd better wear a dress suit over a bathing suit —then you're prepared for anything."

Kennedy, Landis, SEC Aides Named In $1,000,000 Suit

New York, June 27 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, and three others were named defendants in a $1,000,000 damage suit begun today in Federal Court by J. Edward Jones, head of the J. Edward Jones Petroleum Corporation, who charged they "unlawfully planned and conspired" to ruin his business.

Other defendants are James M. Landis, dean of Harvard Law School, and like Kennedy, a former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; and George C. Matthews and Robert E. Healy, officials of the SEC.

The action, Jones said, was brought because of "damage to my business standing and reputation, as the result of the issuance of publicity releases by the individuals sued."

Heroine, 12, Dives Into Mississippi, Saves 4 Sisters

New Madrid, Mo., June 27 (U.P.).—Dorothy Tidwell, 12-year-old farm girl, today plunged three times into the swollen Mississippi River and saved her four younger sisters from death after they were trapped in an automobile that had plunged into deep water. A number of men watched her feat.

Witnesses said the girl was standing on the river bank near her father's car when one of the children released the brakes and the automobile rolled down the bank into the water.

Dorothy ran to the car and pulled Virginia, 8, and Billie Jean, 7, through the windows before the machine became completely submerged. Dorothy then dived into the swirling waters and emerged with 5-year-old Norma Lee. Her second dive resulted in the rescue of 2-year-old Anna.

FHA Celebrating Fourth Birthday

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Housing Administration celebrated its fourth birthday yesterday with $2,500,000,000 worth of business on its books.

Administrator Stewart McDonald over the Radio said about $500,000,000 of the total business had been done since an amendment to the housing act eased restrictions last February.

The number of insured mortgages has increased steadily. An average of about 3,500 new homes are being financed each week, McDonald reported.

Maj. C. M. Brown Dies; War Army Air Expert

Maj. Courtland M. Brown, 54, Air Corps, U. S. Army, died Sunday at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco.

Born in Natick, Mass., he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Army Air Service in 1918. He was promoted to first lieutenant two years later and to captain in 1934. He reached the temporary grade of major on December 12, 1937.

A graduate of the Air Service Balloon and Airship School, Maj. Brown was rated as an airship pilot, balloon observer, air observer and air pilot.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Courtland M. Brown, of Moffett Field, Calif.

Israel Opashinsky Is Buried in N. J.

Funeral services for Israel Opashinsky, who died Thursday at Sibley Hospital, were held at his residence at Alliance, N. J., last Friday. Mr. Opashinsky had been visiting his daughter, Mrs. William Oshinsky, 1437 Iris street northwest, for the last six months.

He immigrated to America from Kiev, Russia, in 1882, settling at Alliance as a farmer. For the last 56 years he had been farming at Alliance.

Besides his daughter, Mr. Opashinsky is survived by three sons, Mendal, of Philadelphia; Irving, of Alliance, and Theodore, of Washington; seven other daughters, Mrs. Jacob Spiegel, of Norma, N. J.; Miss Rose Opashinsky, of Alliance; Mrs. Nathan Rosenberg, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Richard Baylin, of Chester, Pa.; Mrs. Bertha Folston, Mrs. Henry Oxenburg, Mrs. Phillip Helig, all of Washington. He also had 32 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was at Alliance Cemetery, with Rabbi Nathan Bertram officiating.
